SNOW, SLUSH BURY STATE

King Winter Leaves Calling Card—

Winter came along with a song of sleet and slush today . . . and thousands of workers arrived at their offices with wet feet and threatening colds. Snow fall was estimated at 10 inches, which made the walking hazardous for such pedestrians as this one . . . who would prefer a white Christmas to a slushy Thanksgiving. Meanwhile, autoists dug out their cars and skidded wildly.

HEAVY SNOW BURIES N. E.; 2 ARE DEAD

At least two Massachusetts deaths and one of Boston's worst early-winter tie-ups in years resulted today from a storm which blanketed New England with seven to 15 inches of heavy snow.

Rain and thaw, following the sudden snowfall, caught city departments of Greater Boston unprepared. Snow-removal facilities, in the city proper, were in an apparently hopeless tangle for hours.

Pedestrians found downtown streets knee-deep in slush and impassable in many sections.

Blocked catch basins turned gutters to snow-and-slush-choked rivers, crossings remained uncleared for many hours and frantic efforts of public works department heads to organize shovellers continued to be largely unsuccessful.

Principal provision markets and grocery chains warned city officials that unploved streets in residential suburbs threatened delivery of thousands of Thanksgiving turkeys and other holiday supplies.

At noon today, only 1050 of Boston's theoretical roster of 10,000 snow shovellers were actuallf on the job, according to official estimates.

AUTOS BLOCK STREETS

Meantime hundreds of stalled autos were still blocking outlying streets and highways.

The toll of deaths and accidents swelled steadily, and a howling northeast gale, with an accompanying lashings of rain and sleet, imperiled shipping all along the New England coastline.

First Boston storm death was that of a Brookline man who collapsed from a heart attack while shoveling snow in front of his home.

The victim, Herbert J. McMillian, 59, of Oakland rd., was pronounced dead by Dr. John J. Donavan.

PITTSFIELD MAN KILED

At Pittsfield, John Inager, 63, was struck and kiled by an auto. The driver said he was blinded by the snow.

James E. Murphy, 77, of Sumner rd., Brookline, a proof reader for the Boston Record-American, collapsed in Tappan st., Brookline, battling his way home through heavy snow and slush.

Given first aid by police in a nearby school house, he was later taken home and put under doctor's care.

Public Works Commissioner George H. Hyland of Boston said he would have dowgtown streets thoroughly cleared in time for tomorrow's big Santason parade.

But the Thanksgiving program of school foootball games seemed certain of at least part curtailment, with many games already cancelled.

High tides pounded the North and South Shore waterfronts.

Two tugs, sent down the harbor to take the collier Berwindvale, anchored in Presidents Roads, to the Bradley plant in Weymouth, had to return without making the delivery because of the high winds whipping across the harbor.

Only bright spot in the storm picture was generally efficient functioning of Boston Elevated lines and of railroads running into Boston.

Commuters' trains ran only five to ten minutes late and longest delay of through expresses was 80 minutes on New York-Boston, Pittsburgh-Boston and Washington-Boston lines.

Seventy-five plows went into action on main Boston streets a few hours after the first appearance of the snow, but wind and gale intensity soon filled the streets again.

BATTERED ITALIAN FORCES FALLING BACK IN DISORDER

ATHENS, Nov. 27 (AP)—Battered Italian forces, unable to check their retreat despite fresh reinforcements, are falling back in disorder and abandoning a wealth of material, Greek reports said today.

A terse army communique merely reported that Greek troops "continue with success in Albanian territory," and listed six abandoned Italian warplanes as part of the Greeks' booty in the Koritza area.

A government spokesman, however, said Italian reinforcements had failed to brace the Fascists' receding battleline and that even the fresh troops were yielding ground to the bayonet-thrusting Greeks.

That they are leaving behind almost all their vehicles, he said, is a sign of their "broken morale" and the disorganization of their retreat.

Fresh troops are covering the Italian withdrawal, "making desperate efforts to delay our advance," he said, but "the broken morale of the other Italians has been imparted to these troops."

He said they "have been overthrown," and Greek troops are pressing "steadily" forward.

Striking at one of the chief points of entry for Italian supplies and reinforcements, British bombers aiding the Greeks were reported to have made "highly successful raids" on Valona, sheltered Albanian port near the mouth of the Adriatic sea opposite the Italian port of Otranto.

An RAF communique asserted that heavy bombs made direct hits in the harbor on "a big ship which seemed to be in a sinking condition before our aircraft set off."

Damage also was registered on quays, the dock area and airport buildings, and a hangar and one defending plane were destroyed, the RAF asserted. The raids were

Navy Recruit Certainly Has a Lot to Learn

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Navy has discovered a man who says he never has hugged or kissed a girl, eaten chicken or chocolate ice cream, or talked with a girl on the telephone.

Ivan Whitfield, 25 also told a recruiting officer he never had smoked, ordered a meal in a restaurant, watched a prize fight, sent an affectionate letter or telegram to a girl, drunk liquor, danced, or stepped aboard a battleship or submarine.

Whitefield joined the Navy.

'I might switch over on a few things," he observed.

Exploding Refugee Ship Toll Is 22 Dead

JERUSALEM, Nov. 27 (AP)—Twenty-two persons were killed, 21 are missing and 180 were injured as the result of an explosion which capsized the refugee steamer Patria in Haifa harbor Monday, official sources announced today.

DUCE NAVY, BRITISH IN BATTLE

LONDON, Nov. 27 (INS)—A olngrange nava battle in the Mediterranean in which the Italian fleet again fled to its base after coming in contact with the British Navy was announced by the admiralty today.

There were no details beyond the fact the Italian warships again streaked for home after coming in contact with the powerful guns of Britain's "senior service."

The admiralty communique said the Italian warships, which included two battleships and a large force of cruisers and destroyers, immediately fled for their base when they sighted the British warships.

However, the British fleet pursued the fleeing Italian vessels and succeeded in engaging them at long range.

hTe text of the admiralty communique announcing the battle said:

"Information has been received that British naval forces in the Mediterranean made contact shortly before noon today with an Italian force reported to consist of two battleships, acompanied by a large force of cruisers and destroyers.

"The enemy immediately altered course and retired at high speed toward its base when it became aware of the approach of the British forces, but the British ships pursued and engaged the enemy at extreme range. No further information is available at present, but full details will be announced as soon as possible."

The purpose of the recent British aerial raid on the Italian naval base at Taranto, when part of the Italian fleet was reported crippled, was to drive the fleet out into the open sea

Vets Rush to Fill British Yule Ship

By JAMES DOOLING

Tomorrow when you and your family gather around the table for Thanksgiving dinner and an airplane motor drones overhead, nobody except one of the youngsters, maybe, will pay any attention to it.

Young Johnny, who is an aviation enthusiast, might remark:

"There goes the New York plane."

And he might not, being too busily engaged with the drumstick of your festive turkey to notice a plane is flying by. He doesn't have to notice, nor do you. And that's one of the things you have to be thankful for, whether you pause to realize it or not.

But in England tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow, the roar of airplane motors may be mingled with the piercing shrieks of the "Take Cover" sirens in a prelude to a thundering symphony of death from the skies.

Just as New England has countless thousands who have thus far enjoyed the blessings of peace, have never had to race for bombproof shelters for their very lives, so Old England now has countless thousands who have won the race for life, but have left all behind—and lost all.

VETS ENLIST

That is why more than 100,000 American Legionnaires, Veterans of Foreign Wars, women in both of their auxiliaries, have enthusiastically enlisted today in the Boston American-Record-Advertiser campaign to fill with warm, winter clothing, "A CHRISTMAS SHIP FOR ENGLAND."

It is a ship for the civilian victims, babies, children, women, old folks, who have been bombed out of their homes in Hitler's ruthless air war.

Speaking for the American Legion's 50,000 members in Massachusetts, Dept. Commdr. Chester T. Grant hailed this humane program as an opportunity for full expression of the aims expressed in the platform adopted at the Legion's national convention.

"For the first time in its history, the American Legion in September departed from its traditional stand of neutrality," Dept. Commdr. Grant pointed out.

"The platform states that 'we should . . . give all practicable aid to Great Britain.'

"There is no finer, no nobler way of proving that we mean these words than to come to the assistance of those helpless wom-

Pair Nabbed in Plot Against Mrs. McLean

ATLANTA, Nov. 27 (AP)—Two Midwestern youths were held in jail at Gainesville, Ga., by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for questioning in a case involving an extortion threat against Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, wife of the former publisher of the Washington Post, Safety Commissioner Lon Sullivan reported.

MRS. EVALYN WALSH McLEAN

Youths Held in Threats

The youths, Sullivan said last night, were arrested at Lavonia, Ga., Saturday night by FBI agents and a member of the Georgia highway patrol. They were taken into custody on their arrival "from Cincinnati with a convoy of used cars," the safety commissioner added.

R. G. Danner, in charge of the Atlanta office of the FBI, declined to discuss the case, but an FBI official in Washington acknowledged the bureau was investigating an extortion threat against Mrs. McLean, owner of the famous Hope diamond.

Mrs. McLean in 1932 was victimized to the tune of $104,000 at the time of the Lindbergh kidnaping by the late Gaston B. Means, notorious spy, swindler and bunco man. Means, who served a long federal prison term for the offense, obtained the money from Mrs. McLean on the promise he would bring about the return of the kidnaped child—Editor's note.

'Lost' Boy Stayed At Home of Chum

A search in the storm for 10-year-old Richard Scorzoni, who had been missing since 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, ended today when he walked into his home on Hutchins rd., Medford.

The little boy had been at his chum's house not far away. He went home with his friend after school and decided it would be fun to spend the night there.

His mother, Mrs. Frank R. Scorzoni, was in a state of collapse until the search ended.

OFFICIAL STATE VOTE ANNOUNCED

Official figures of State returns disclosed today that 35,297 of the 2,062,290 Massachusetts voters who cast ballots in the Nov. 5 election failed to vote for any candidate for President.

An even greater number—53,465—registered no choice for Governor. The gubernatorial outcome, in which Governor Saltonstall had a plurality of 7450 votes over Paul A. Dever, is undergoing a recount.

The figures showed that Sen. Walsh (D.), in winning re-election, polled the highest vote of any candidate—1,088,858.

President Roosevelt, who received 1,076,522 votes for a plurality of 136,822 over Wendell Willkie, was second highest.

Republican Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook, re-elected with 1,052,390 votes, was the only other candidate to cross the million mark.

Governor Saltonstall was just 136 short of the mark with 999,864.

Thomas J. (Mystery Man) Buckley, who was the only Democrat to win state office, was elected auditor by a margin of 43,545 over Russell A. Wood.

Dever Gains 77 Votes In State Recount

A net gain of 77 votes was chalked up by Atty-Gen. Paul A. Dever today on the basis of gubernatorial recount figures from the first 49 Massachusetts' 1820 precincts.

Gov. Saltonstall had an original plurality of 7450 over Dever in the election, with approximately 2,000,000 votes cast.

Greatest net increase for the Democratic candidate was recorded at Newton, Governor Saltonstall's home city, where 21 of the city's 26 precincts counted gave Dever 58 votes more than originally.

The Governor, on the other hand, benefited by a shift in Fall River, where with 17 of 46 precincts counted, Saltonstall picked up 41 votes.

Dever gained 18 in Saugus, 13 in Middleboro, 9 in Amherst, 4 in Leominster and 1 in Dighton.

Both Newton and Fall River resumed their recounting today as the following communities began theirs:

Brockton, Nahant, Wrentham, Ipswich, Concord, Whitman, Eastham, Millville, Hamilton, Arlington, East Longmeadow, Medford, Lincoln, Somerville, Littleton, Cummington.

Counting will be suspended tomorrow during Thanksgiving. The recount in Boston, the State's largest city, will start Monday.

ATTLEE RE-ELECTED

en, children and aged who have been innocent victims of Hitler's savage aerial warfare."

Dept. Commdr. Grant, through Dept. Adjt. Coleman Curran, dispatched letters to commanders of 375 posts throughout the state enlisting all members in the soliciting and collecting of new or usable clothing, to be sent to England in a fortnight on the Christmas ship.

LEADERS HELP

Working with the Legionnaires will be the 25,000 women who are members of the A. L. auxiliaries. Their leaders promised "fullest cooperation in this unselfish cause."

"Sponsors of the CHRISTMAS SHIP FOR ENGLAND may count 100 per cent on the support and whole-hearted co-operation of the 20,000 members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the 5000 splendid women in their auxiliaries," State Comdr. Edward J. O'Brien of Worcester declared.

"There is not one of us who does not realize the hardships that these helpless civilians must be undergoing in this continual bombing of their homes.

"The Hearst papers are to be highly praised for inaugurating this Christmas Ship campaign and I am certain that all of us realize the work the British War Relief Society ha been doing. W are all only too happy and proud to play a part in this humanitarian program."

WOMEN TO PACK

State Commdr. O'Brien's message, sent to commanders of 300 posts throughout the state, called upon veterans and members of their auxiliaries to canvas their neighborhoods for donations of clothing. The women in the auxiliaries will aid in the packing of these gifts.

Nor is the activity in this inspired movement to fill the CHRISTMAS SHIP FOR ENGLAND confined to this state alone.

In Lewiston, Me., Mayor Fernand Despins issued an appeal to the citizens of his city to give their full support to the campaign and has arranged to have police headquarters in the center of the city used as a receiving station for donations.

In New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, officials were taking similar steps and promised to have their collecting committees hard at work within a few hours. Martin Silverstein is acting as Providence chairman of collections and Morris Espo is doing the work in Pawtucket.

GIVE NO CASH

Edward J. Rhatigan, executive chairman of the Christmas Ship Committees, warned the public last night against giving any cash or clothing donations to unauthorized solicitors.

"There are always some unscrupulous persons who seek to take advantage of a movement of this kind," he explained. "The police should be called if your suspicions are aroused."

Another point he stressed, in connection with donations of used clothing, is:

THAT ALL CLOTHING SHOULD BE WARM; SUITABLE FOR WINTER WEAR; IN GOOD REPAIR; AND WASHED OR CLEANSED, THEN PRESSED.

Obviously light clothing will be of no use to those who need garments in the bitter winter weather of England.

If clothing is not thoroughly cleaned it will not be passed by public health officials. Pressing makes for better packing.

SPACE PRECIOUS

Cargo space on this Christmas Ship is precious, as it is on all ships that run the gauntlet of mines, submarines, planes and warships between these shores and Great Britain.

In Boston, where Supt. of Schools Arthur L. Gould was preparing a letter to be read to all 120,000 pupils in the public schools, it was announced that a committee of teachers was being organized in each district to oversee the work of collecting clothing.

In addition, there will be district supervisors to spur on the work of the district committees.

"I have the utmost confidence that the response from our schools will be inspiring," Supt. Gould declared.

Police Commr. Timilty announced, yesterday, that the Junior Police have volunteered to aid in the work of collecting parcels from householders who are unable to deliver them in person at receiving centers.

These youngsters, reporting in to Deputy Supt. William J. Carey, will be on hand at certain hours every day at each of Boston's 18 police stations.

If you have a parcel of clothing ready for the Christmas Ship and you notify your police station you'd like to have someone come and get it, you'll have a bright young Junior Police member calling pronto.

Yesterday notes and cards were received from many Greater Boston women volunteering their services at Christmas Ship for England headquarters at 100 Summer st., in downtown Boston, but there is still great need for many more.

If you can find time to assist in the work of sorting, listing and packing clothing that will go into cases for the Christmas Ship, please inform the headquarters by either mail or telephone.

Office hours are from 8:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. Telephones are LIBerty 2458, 2564, 2658.

And for those who are collecting clothing in their own neighborhoods: Please see that each parcel carries the name and address of the donor.

Watch the Boston Record-American daily for further details.

Here are types of clothing needed by bombed, homeless civilians in England, as suggested by Robert W. Mortimore, chairman of the Greater Boston Committee of the British War Relief Society, Inc. SNOW BLANKET HALTS WORK FOR CAMP EDWARDS 15,000

By JAMES F. McENANEY

CAMP EDWARDS, Nov. 27—With a blanket of snow covering the entire camp, more than 15,000 workers were forced to remain idle today because of the storm.

At the same time more than 1500 officers and men of the 68th Coast Artillery, (anti-aircraft) scored a victory over the snowstorm by safely entrenching themselves in 30 of the new barrack buildings before the storm started.

Last night the 68th, under command of Lt.-Col. Paul H. French, broke the tent camp, where they have lived since September, and moved into newly constructed buildings.

HURL NEW CHARGES

Dissatisfaction is still rife among carpenters who have been fired and others still working.

The New Bedford local, which gained jurisdiction over the signing up of carpenter's at $75 apiece, has become the target of new charges brought by disgruntled workers.

These workmen acuse Joseph Guilbeault, business agent for the union, of failing to deliver membership books to carpenters now paid up in full.

One carpenter, whose name must be withheld, said he asked union officials for his book and was informed to "read his contract."

Inserted in the contract was a phrase pertaining to an examination as a carpenter.

It was revealed by union officials that failure to pass a carpentry examination given under the direction of union officials, would give the New Bedford local or any local the power to disqualify a worker and refuse to issue his union book.

The union also reserves the right to keep his $75 initiation fee and the carpenter is then "left out in the cold."

300 PAINTERS IDLE

Union officers retaliate by complaining that many of the carpenters have been more interested in beating the union on the weekly collection of initiation payment fees than in completing their union qualifications.

Close to 300 painters were deprived of work today because of the storm. This marks the third postponment for the painters.

YOU'LL SEE THEM TOMORROW — Awaiting tomorrow's Santason parade are these two of the three little pigs, who get a final checkup. They, with several other toyland characters, will thrill thousands along the parade route.

Devens Parley Held To Ward Off Strike

FORT DEVENS, Nov. 27—To prevent a strike by more than 3000 members of the Laborers' Union, who demand double time for Sundays and holidays, a conference was held at Army headquarters here today between labor officials, contractor representatives and officers of the Army construction quartermaster division.

While the conference was in progress, John H. Griffith, head of the Lowell Central Labor Union, said he had received a telegram from A. F. of L. President William Green to the effect that a national official of the Building and Trades Union would begin an investigation into charges of alleged "job selling activities" and unfair union practices at Fort Devens.

3000 Sheep Tramp Down Snow, Save 200 in Film Cast

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Nov. 27 (AP)—Chief Frank Seumptewa and 3000 sheep came to Director Howard Hawks' rescue.

A company of 200 was assembled at Moencopi, Hopi Indian village 90 miles north of Flagstaff, to start filming "The Outlaw," Howard Hughes' new story of Billy the Kid.

Heavy snowfall blocked proceedings, so the chief and his tribesmen herded their sheep back and forth for six hours over a two-mile area, tramping down the snow.

GABRIEL S. SMITH DIES IN HOLYOKE

HOLYOKE, Nov. 27—Gabriel S. Smith, 28, nephew of City Treasurer Lionel Bonvouloir and grandson of the late Peter Bonvouloir, for 40 years city treasurer here, died accidentally by illuminating gas in his home, Medical Examiner J. B. Bigelow reported today.

ROUTE OF TOMORROW'S SANTASON PARADE

SANTASON IS NEARING HUB FOR BIG PARADE

Well ahead of his schedule, Santonson was winging his way leisurely to Boston today after pausing at Cleveland in his amphibian plane, The Northwind, which is taking him here for the big parade in his honor tomorrow.

When he stepped out of his plane at the Cleveland airport, Santa's son received one of the greatest welcomes ever accorded a national hero.

But the greeting was nothing compared with the one Boston has planned for Santason when he lands his plane on the Charles River at 10:45 a. m. tomorrow—15 minutes before parade time.

The procession, which will start at Embankment rd. and Beacon st., will come as a thrilling climax in a city which has seen a record-breaking number of parades this year, including the Legion spectacle.

This 12th annual Santason classic, however, is described as the parade of parades by Jordan Marsh Co., the sponsors, because it is the children who get the biggest thrill from a parade and this parade has been especially designed for them.

Jordan Marsh officials said, too, that the 1940 parade has been greatly lengthened by the addition of many new units brought here especially from Pittsburgh.

This new unit, known as the Jean Gros Children's Parade and made up of 55 features, boasts an animal balloon that depicts the dinosaur of the stone age.

A replica in size and detail of the prehistoric monster, this mammoth balloon is more than 100 feet long and will require a crew of 52 men to manipulate it through Boston's winding streets.

The most important float, naturally, will be that on which Santason and his father, Santa Claus, ride. Finished in gold and silver and trimmed with icicles, this float will carry Santa's throne. On each of the four corners will be replicas of 10-foot Christmas candy canes.

The line of march will be four miles in length, starting at Embankment rd. at Beacon st. promptly at 11 o'clock and winding its way up Beacon st., to School st., to Washington st., to Summer st., to Chauncy st., to Essex st., and again to Washington st., then to Stuart st., to Tremont st., to West st., and finally back to Washington st., where the parade disbands in front of Jordan Marsh Company.

F. D. Seeks Curb on Dies Blasts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt has telegraphed Chairman Dies (D.) of Texas, of the House committee on un-American activities that careful executive plans to combat subversive activities "may be severely handicapped or completely destroyed" by premature disclosure of facts or of suppositions to the public.

The President told Dies that departmental investigations also might be hindered by "hasty seizure of evidence" or by "giving of immunities" to witnesses before congressional committees.

The White House telegram sent to Dies last night at Orange, Tex., after a presidential secretary had received an acceptance from the Texan for a conference with President Roosevelt Friday on dividing spheres of jurisdiction of congressional and departmental work against subversive influences.

BRITISH CALL U. S. 'SECOND ARSENAL'

LONDON, Nov. 27 (AP)—A member of the British war cabinet disclosed today that Britain had made a "clean breast" of her deficiencies to the United States and expects North America soon to become "a second arsenal" sufficient to insure British victory.

This came from Minister Without Portfolio Arthur Greenwood in vigorous House of Commons debate on the Laborite assertion that the Churchill government had failed "to face the facts that the dice of war are heavily loaded against us."

Almost at the same time Ernest Bevin, minister of labor, announced to Commons that "between now and next June there will be another enormous call-up" of Britain's manhood for the fighting services.

Greenwood echoed Prime Minister Churchill's recent statement that Britain is far from being fully armed.

FORECASTS VICTORY

However, he went on to say that her military potential is growing and eventually would triumph.

He replied to vigorous labor charges of government over-optimism, timidity and failure to mobilize the unemployed for a part in war production.

He acknowledged that the increase in the output of war equipment "is not enough," but added that the flow of material from the United States "is increasing, even if it is tardy."

U. S. GIVEN FACTS

Greenwood continued:

"We are now co-operating with the United States in order that our joint needs shall be met with the least possible delay and in order to insure that we shall get that high priority that we undoubtedly need.

"I have made a clean breast of our difficulties to them in order that they could profit by our experience and that, I believe, they are doing.

"I think that before very long, if the cordial relations between this country and the United States continue—and I imagine they will become increasingly cordial—North America will be a second arsenal from which we can obtain increasing supplies to supplement and make good any of our deficiencies."

MUST AID SHIPPING

"I do not wish to minimize our difficulties, but I do not think the picture is altogether gloomy, although the situation is not one which we relish," Greenwood said.

The minister went on to say that while shipping losses are "much like April, 1917, . . . the position is not so bad as it might have been but for the actual increase in merchant tonage built here . . .

"It is a heavy responsibility that rests on the Admiralty to see that we get some reasonable measure of security for our shipping, for if we do not our plight is going to become very serious.

"The loss of war material in transit is not sufficient to cause alarm . . . Let us admit that recent enemy air attacks have retarded our expanding program, but beyond that I do not go.

"I do not believe we are at the end of our difficulties; I think these difficulties will increase; there may be some of a new kind to grapple with.

"What we can say with certainty is that Britain's resources and the capacity and the growing help of North America outmatch the industrial resources and the capacity of the enemy."

"KNOCK OUT ITALY"

Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war secretary and conservative, joined the Laborite criticism of the government's policy. Hore-Belisha declared that Greenwood had "offered us no remedy" and declared that "unemployment at the most critical moment of our whole history appears to be increasing."

Shipbuilding is behind schedule, Hore-Belisha charged, and the shipping minister has "offered us no hope except for accession of tonnage from the United States which, he said, "is not a mercantile shipbuilding nation and has many preoccupations with its own naval difficulties both in the Atlantic and the Pacific."

Hore-Belisha declared that "the real remedy" would be "to knock Italy out of the war. The Greeks have opened the way . . . This is out great opportunity."

Demanding to know why a part of the Italian fleet was permitted to flee Taranto for "safer refuge" after Britain's Armistice Day air attack, the former war secretary asked:

"Are we to fight war offensively against Italy or not?"

Transport Minister Colonel Moore-Brabazon, touching on another of the war's sorespots, said he was "very dissatisfied" with scanty food arrangements on trains.

2-Day Drunk Kills Oswald, Pet Duck Of CCC Camp

RENO, Nov. 27 (AP)—Oswald, the pet duck at CCC Camp Idlewild, is dead—after a two-day siege of acute alcoholism. He imbibed too deeply of automobile anti-freeze.

Most of the enrollees turned out for the funeral—Oswald was buried in a red, white and blue casket—but the more conservative said Oswald was disgraceful. He hiccoughed. He reeled and he stumbled. With one wing hooked over a water pipe he gave the waterfowl version of "Sweet Adeline."

Then the shivers set in and Oswald went to the happy hunting ground where hunters shoot only blank shells.

RAF Bomb Blasts Fire Turin

LONDON, Nov. 27 (AP)—A rapid-fire attack by British heavy bombers on the very center of Italian war production was reported by the air ministry today to have lighted "a number of fires" in the factory city of Turin and set it shaking with bursts of its own explosives.

The air ministry news service revealed that R. A. F. bombers had raided the German city of Cologne and said two direct bomb hits were made on an armament factory.

In two night attacks on the Rhineland cathedral city, the news service said, R. A. F. bombers directed their missiles at power plants, freight yards and stations on both sides of the river. Twelve big explosions along the river's docks were reported by R. A. F. pilots.

As the R. A. F. lunged at both Turin and Berlin last night, the Axis assaults on Britain lagged for a second successive night, and recurring raid warnings today brought only scattered, mild attacks to the British Isles.

London had its third, brief alarm in midafternoon, but no incidents were reported immediately.

ROYAL ARSENAL ATTACKED

The raiders over Turin were said by the air ministry to have attacked the royal arsenal and "greatly increased" damage done to the city Saturday night.

Damage to buildings in the center and outskirts of Turin, Italy's leading industrial city, was acknowledged by the Italian communique today, but the arsenal was not mentioned among the targets.—Editor's Note.

Although Nazi bombers laid off completely after midnight, they were back early this morning and put London under a one-hour daylight alarm at about 7 a. m. The raiders came up the Thames estuary and bombed two places on the capital's outskirts.

LONDON HAS SECOND ALERT

A short time later, London had a second alert which lasted only a few minutes. No sounds of bombs or gunfire were heard. Axis planes were reported near two unnamed Welsh towns.

Just before dawn, a few bombs fell in the London area and at two points in eastern England, with no casualties and little damage, a joint communique of the air and home security ministers said.

Rome Claims Six British Warships Hit

ROME, Nov. 27—Six British warships were hit when Italian warplanes bombed the naval base at Alexandria on Nov. 19, the Fascist high command announced today.

Italian squadrons also rained heavy calibre bombs on the Alexandria docks of the Suez Canal Company, the announcement said.

Italian bombers, it said, attacked British troop concentrations and motorized columns in Greece and raided forts on the Greek island of Corfu for the second successive day.

British Ship Sunk In Indian Ocean

CANBERRA, Australia, Nov. 27 (AP)—An "enemy raider" sank the 8739-ton British cargo ship Port Brisbane in the middle of the Indian ocean five days ago, W. M. Hughes, Australian navay minister, disclosed today.

Hughes said an Australian warship had arrived at an Australian port with 27 survivors.

German communiques recently have reported sinkings of merchant ships in "overseas waters" by German surface raiders. Some of these are known to have occurred in the north Atlantic but there have been previous reports of a raider in the Indian ocean. —Editor's note.

64 FALL BEFORE IRON GUARD EXECUTIONERS

BUCHAREST, Nov. 27 (INS)—Exacting grim vengeance, Iron Guardist firing squads today executed 64 former Rumanian ministers and other officials accused of responsibility for the slaying of a famous Iorn Guard leader.

Victims of the mass execution were former government officials and police officers sentenced to death by a special court for alleged complicity in the murder of Corneliu Codreanu.

After the 64 condemned men were put to death, the exhumed body of Codreanu was placed in an Iron Guard church, where it lay in state while thousands of mourners passed by. Codreanu will be given a state funeral in the near future.

Those who fell before the firing squad bullets included former Premier and War Minister Gen. Argetianu, who was declared by the court responsible for the "massacre" of more than 1000 Iron Guardists.

LOVELY, urbane Madeleine Carroll, often called "the most beautiful woman on the screen," is finally tangled with the big heroic outdoors in Paramount's "North West Mounted Police." Cecil B. De Mille's technicolor epic opens tomorrow on the Metropolitan screen.

Gary Cooper in West Epic at Met Thursday

Cowboy Role Ideal for Star

After 15 years in Hollywood, Gary Cooper today is, in a way, right back where he started! In a pair of buckskin pants, a checkered shirt, a tight-fitting vest, a ten-gallon hat, and a pair of six-guns, he is playing the lead in Cecil B. DeMille's most pretentious production, the technicolor "North West Mounted Police," which opens tomorrow on the Metropolitan screen.

Costarring with Madeleine Carroll, Cooper, wearing a cowboy outfit, is cast as a member of the Texas Rangers come to Canada to get his man right under the noses of the magnificent mounties.

The co-feature, "Youth Will Be Served," stars youthful Jane Withers.

Originally intended as a road show production, Cecil B. De Mille's "North West Mounted Police" is being shown at holiday prices tomorrow, with admissions 65 cents for adults and 28 cents for children. Other weekday prices are announced at 35 cents to 1 p. m.; 44 cents from 1 to 5 p. m.; 65 cents from 5 to closing. Saturday's price rule is set at 25 cents to 1 p. m.; 55 cents from 1 to 5 p. m.; 65 cents from 5 to closing.

'Bitter Sweet' On Color Screen

Noel Coward, known to the screen as both actor and playwright, is represented for the first time as a composer in his operetta, "Bitter Sweet," which opens tomorrow on Loew's State and Orpheum screens with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in the co-starring roles. The film is in technicolor.

Miss MacDonald is seen as Victorian belle Sarah Millick, and Eddy as her Viennese voice teacher, Carl Linden, with whom she elopes on the eve of her wedding to Harry Daventry, played by Edward Ashley.

Sarah and Carl live an idyllic life in Vienna until an Austrian cavalry officer, Enron von Tranisch, played by George Sanders, begins paying her attention. Then comes the dramatic denouement.

Ian Hunter is seen as Lord Shayne, gambling opponent of Von Tranisch and benefactor of Sarah and Carl. In comedy roles are Felix Bressart and Curt Bois as penniless musicians, Sig Rumann as Herr Schlick, cafe owner, and Herman Bing as the market-keeper. Also prominently cast are Fay Holden, Diana Lewis, Lynne Carver and Janet Beecher.

W. S. Van Dyke, II, directed, with Victor Saville as producer. The screen play is by Lesser Samuels. The Noel Coward score was arranged for the screen by Herbert Stothart, the stars singing eleven of the Coward songs.

The co-feature is to be "Kit Carson," an exciting romance co-starring Jon Hall and Lynn Bari.

JEANETTE MacDONALD and Nelson Eddy provide eye-and-ear entertainment in "Bitter Sweet," Metro's film adaptation of Noel Coward's operetta opening tomorrow on Loew's State and Orpheum screens.

Kyser's Gang Returns

Mystery Musical On Memorial Bill

"You'll Find Out," Kay Kyser's second musical film and the screen's first mystery musical, complete with chills, thrills, laughs and shivery mystery, opens at the Keith Memorial Theater tomorrow, Thanksgiving Day. Co-featured is "Pastor Hall" with an all-star cast.

Featured with the Ol' Professor of the College of Musical Knowledge" are the three foremost merchants of menace in pictures today, Peter (CM") Lorre, Boris ("Frankenstein") Karloff and Bela ("Dracula") Legosi, along with a notable supporting cast that includes Dennis O'Keefe, Helen Parrish, Alma Kruger and Kyser's famous Band with Ginny Simms, Harry Babbitt, Ish Kabibble and Sully Mason.

The story of "You'll Find Out" is laid in the vast halls, spooky passages and secret rooms of an enormous mansion where Helen Parrish is giving a birthday party.

Three men of mystery, however, turn the gay affair into a macabre setting for fiendish skullduggery. In an effort to gain control of the fortune this girl will receive on her birthday, this horror trio, Lorre, Karloff and Lugosi, plot to murder the girl during the festivities. However their most diabolical machinations are no match for the bungling and frightened but effective interference of Musical Hawkshaw Kay Kyser and his gang.

Five new melodies by James McHugh and John Mercer are introduced in this film musical.

"Pastor Hall," the film with which the name of James Roosevelt has been prominently identified gets with a prologue by Eleanor Roosevelt. Briefly, it is the story of a beloved pastor in a German village who has no personal hatred against any man, but who refuses to bow to the State's desires. The resulting consequences make for one of the most gripping stories of the season. The featured roles are taken by Wilfrid Lawson and Nova Pilbeam.

Gifts for Women At Loew's Premiere

First 200 women attending tomorrow's opening performance of Noel Coward's musical adaptation, "Bitter Sweet," co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, will be gifted with a box of candy by Loew's management. The opening will mark the seventh time Miss MacDonald and Eddy have joined for a personal appearance of the beautiful actress in concert here Friday evening at Symphony Hall.

DELECTABLE Dixie Dunbar is importantly featured in the Thanksgiving Day stage show, starting a four-day engagement tomorrow at the RKO-Boston.

Skillful Landing Saves Pilot, Plane

Skillful handling of a crippled plane by a student flier today was credited with having prevented a possible tragedy on Spectacle Island following a forced landing by Carlos Bonham, M. I. T. sophomore.

After the motor of his cub plane went dead, Bonham of Beacon st., Back Bay, an Hawaiian, succeeded in landing without injury to himself or his plane.

"Hollywood Stars On Parade" is the formal billing of the Boston's forthcoming stage show which has been making a triumphant cross-country tour.

Vernon, recognized as one of the screen's foremost comedians, may be counted upon to deliver some really funny stuff. Dixie Dunbar, Metro's and Paramount's gill-size dancing star most recently seen in the picture, "Pigskin Parade," and the stage musical, "Yokel Boy," has selected four of the latter's best dancers to appear with her in this revue.

Arrens and Broderick in their "Opera in the Fuff," Paul Remos and his tiny acrobats and Al Loyal's dogs, featured performers of Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus, round out this revue.

SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE of Beverly had the fun of seeing his brother, John Lodge, portray a famous historical character in the French movie "Sarajevo" which opened at the Fine Arts Theater last evening . . . The film depicts the fateful story of Franz Ferdinand of Austria (played by John Lodge) whose assassination at Sarajevo brought about the beginning of the last World War . . .

The opening was sponsored by a prominent group of local socialites to raise funds for ambulances for Britain . . . Mrs. John Lodge, the former Francesca Braggiotti, was mistress of ceremonies . . . Her husband, who is playing in a musical show on Broadway, sent his regrets in a telegram which he announced read during intermission . . . In keeping with the patriotic spirit of the affair Francesca wore a sort of Star Spangled dress . . . fashioned with a full white skirt and bodice of red, white and blue metal cloth . . . Flowers in the patriotic colors adorned the chignon of her long blonde hair . . .

Lucy Rantoul Thorndike's hubby presented her with the swanky pair of cerise and gold evening shoes which his lucky number drew . . . and the women were all envious of the man who won the $20 permanent wave! . . .

Mrs. Edwin S. Webster carried a huge gold kid evening bag with her black velvet and silver fox, and her sister, Mrs. Henry Harris, wore black velvet adorned with red roses . . . There was lots of glitter around the neckline of Mrs. Alonzo Wessel's black gown . . . Olga Monks Pertzoff wore her usual lace mantilla . . . Still others enjoying the movie were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jackson Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Codman, Mrs. George Aldrich and Mrs. George Lee . . .

Thanksgiving Menu a la 1940

By MARTHA LEE

Americans feel that they have a great deal to be thankful for this year and no doubt Thanksgiving Day, 1940, will be as full of meaning as that first Thanksgiving three centuries ago when the Pilgrim Fathers first demonstrated their appreciation for the good things of this land.

However, there will be many things that will be the way you like this menu. Witness how easily the following menu can be prepared.

THANKSGIVING MENU

Tomato-Horseradish Cocktail
Canned Home-Style Consomme with Almond Cream Topping
Fresh Cucumber Pickle
Celery Curls Carrot Flowers
Candied Cranberries in Cornucopias
Roast Turkey with Stuffing
Sweet Potatoes
Broccoli Hollandaised
Fig Pudding Cherry Sauce
Nuts Coffee Mints

Going through the menu, you will notice many of the foods can be purchased already prepared and the rest, with the exception of the turkey, may be well started the day before.

THE APPETIZER

To make a tomato-horseradish cocktail to serve six, first soak one teaspoon evaporated horseradish in one teaspoon cold water for 10 minutes. Combine this with the contents of two 12-oz. cans tomato juice. Chill overnight and serve in cocktail glasses.

THE RELISHES

It is clever to serve a variety of relishes in place of salad. Carrot flowers paprika celery curls, fresh cucumber pickle arranged together on a plate make a particularly colorful combination. To prepare the paprika celery curls, cut small stalks or short pieces of cleaned celery lengthwise into thin shreds, cutting to within one-half inch of the leaves or ends of the pieces. Place in ice water to curl. Just before serving, drain the celery and dip the end of each curl in paprika.

Cut carrot flowers by making lengthwise cuts one-eighth inch deep and a fraction of an inch apart all around. Then cut crosswise into paper thin slices. Keep the slices in ice water an hour before serving so petals will curl and crisp. Prepare the celery curls and carrot flowers the day before, however.

CANDIED CRANBERRIES

Pick over and wash cranberries. Do not drain thoroughly. Mix equal parts of berries and sugar in top of double boiler and cook over simmering water until sugar is a thick syrup, about 1½ hours. Stir occasionally during the cooking. Cool. Serve with roast poultry.

CORNUCOPIAS

A large size metal tube is desirable on which to shape and bake the cornucopias. Or cones may be shaped from heavy paper. Pie-crust pastry, cut small rounds and shape over form. Set upright on baking sheet and bake in hot oven, 450 deg. F., until lightly browned, 8 to 10 minutes. Remove from form, cool. Fill with candied cranberries.

MODERATE HEAT, uncovered, no water added to the pan—these are modern turkey roasting methods. Serve turkey with cranberry cornucopias.

CANNED FIG PUDDING WITH CHERRY SAUCE

¼ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 cup cherry juice
1 cup drained cherries
1 large (1-lb. 11-oz.) can fig pudding

Combine butter and sugar and blend well; add cherry juice; cook, stirring constantly, to boiling point, then boil without stirring 15 minutes. Add cherries. Heat can of fig pudding according to directions on the label. Place whole pudding on plate, then pour sauce over. Take to table and serve at once. Sauce may be made the day before and reheated or it may be served cold over hot pudding.

ROASTING TURKEY

Moderate heat, uncovered, no water added to the pan—these are modern roasting methods. The recommended oven temperature for turkey is 300 deg. F., or "preferably between 250 deg. and 300 deg. F."—lower temperatures than many cooks use. Cooking time tables allow 18 to 20 minutes per pound for medium sized turkeys—10 to 16 pounds dressed.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

A BRITISH refugee mother, penniless widowed, fighting desperately for self-control, has asked me to reprint a story told in this column years ago.

The story concerns Gen. John C. Fremont, "Pathfinder" of the West, who on one of his most dangerous expeditions into California.

Seeking a way through the then unchartered Rockies, Fremont had accepted a guide who claimed he knew a safe trail. As a matter of fact, he had little knowledge of the country and had volunteered through vanity. But, by the time this was discovered, they were many days from their starting point and hopelessly lost in a mountain wilderness with savage [illegible] waiting them in.

GEN. FREMONT made camp as best he could, then started the long wait for rescue, of which he had little hope. Day after day, fear and monotony gnawed deeper at his men's morale.

Like a wolf pack waiting for the kill, they circled close and closer around their leader . . . snarling, curious . . . eyeing the diminishing provisions. Daily it snowed. Daily sullenness and delirium made their pangs more desperate.

Then sheer horror struck. Two men disappeared, went out into the storm to seek a possible exit from their trap. Only one returned—a half-mad creature who could not lift his blasted eyes above the shameful stains on shirt and beard-[illegible] Cannibalism! Who would be next?

One wonders what the General's thoughts were on that night as he huddled in his tattered tent. One man [illegible] a gang of maddened beasts. A small man at that, delicately built, exquisitely groomed, he had been rated a dandy—sometimes laughed at by those who did not know what steel lay beneath the tailored broadcloth. To many it seemed incredible that such fastidious slenderness should put its strength against the danger and immensity of the wilderness. Yet he had, many times—and won. But now his trail seemed ended.

Quietly he put his few effects in order, left what directions he could. This done, he wrote a farewell letter to the young wife he adored. Then, with the dawn breaking, he stepped out, faced the pack whose blood-shot eyes glared beyond him into the [illegible] for the last food [illegible].

Now [illegible]. One step they took forward, then another. The general did not move. Now their breath was on him . . . the stench of their starved bodies. Another step—then death!

But death seemed, must wait its turn. For, inside the dazed men stared. Fremont calmly filled a basin with water, took a small package from his pocket — and proceeded to wash his teeth!

ONE LONG DRAWN moment, beside its open grave, and then the [illegible] One small, civilized gesture [illegible] murder at bay . . . saved rocking minds from utter savagery. Bad days were still ahead, but the crisis had passed.

Many [illegible] waiting through the dreadful nights, working through the meaningless days, trying to calm the hysteria that [illegible] the thought of that [illegible] Then [illegible] a man, with every [illegible] won [illegible] fighting the gas-[illegible].

Doing the small job that [illegible] minute at a time . . . steadying himself by [illegible] until the terror lifts.

As England, God save her, is doing today!

Rain and Thaw Turn City Streets to Slush

In Jamaica Plain, West Roxbury, Back Bay and downtown points stalled autos impeded the work of plows.

Blinding flakes, plastered on windshields, caused minor accidents by the score and in South Boston the storm was blamed for the crash of a fire truck and auto. Ladder 5, returning from a fire, collided with a coupe owned by Lawrence Landy 3d, of Lawrence ct., South Boston, at West Fourth and B sts.

PINNED UNDER CAR

In Brookline, police rescued a Quincy motorist who had tried to push his auto from a snowdrift but who in turn was pinned under the machine when it slipped from Jamaica Parkway into Leverett Pond.

The victim, Gustave Andren, 31, was found partly submerged in the water, with a broken leg, by Patrolman James Holt.

Rain intermingled with the falling snow at daybreak, increasing the slush and slippery conditions. Rubbers and overshoes were on demand in downtown stores as Thanksgiving shoppers sought protection from soggy streets.

400 MEN CALLED

More than 400 workmen crowded the Albany st. yards as the Boston public works department started its first big shoveling task of the season.

State highway plows and sanding machines opened main highways during the early morning hours, but police at all points in New England warned of freezing rain, sleet and icy roads.

TRAGEDY AVERTED

Bus, airplane and street car transportation was slowed by the storm, although railroads reported all lines open and on schedule. Passenger transports using East Boston Airport were ordered kept on the ground when the snow turned into driving rain and sleet.

Quick action by firemen working under severe handicap, averted possible tragedy today as two spectacular fires broke out at Revere High School, the other in East Boston.

Scores of persons were roused and several were forced to flee in night clothing to icy streets as firemen fought a blaze of undetermined origin in two vacant buildings on Orleans st., East Boston.

In the Revere blaze, several hundred supporters of Mayor Laurence J. Gillis had hardly quit a political meeting in the high school auditorium when fire was discovered racing through the top of the school building.

WIRING BLAMED

Fire Chief T. J. McCarrick blamed defective wiring in the auditorium on the second floor, where the fire originated. Damage was estimated at $x00.

Three rescue ships today maneuvered near the water-logged Greek steamer Eugena Cambanis, fighting to keep afloat in gales off Cape Race, Newfoundland. Meanwhile, Boston Coast Guard headquarters picked up faint SOS signals from a second storm-buffeted ship, a Canadian craft.

The vessels, one British and two of formerly belligerent nations, made no further radio reports after notifying that they were proceeding to the rescue of the Greek freighter.

Schools Close, Pupils Get 5-Day Holiday

Schools in numerous eastern Massachusetts cities and towns were closed today because of the driving rain, slush and sloggy drifts of snow.

Whoops of joy from countless numbers of school children went up when they learned the storm had given them a five-day vacation, as tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day and no sessions will be held Friday.

Sessions were cancelled today in Cambridge, Somerville, Lynn, Revere, Malden (morning session), Melrose, Brockton, Beverly, Saugus, Weston, Reading, Waltham, Chelsea, Swampscott, Natick, Burlington, Stoneham, Wenham, Lexington, Marblehead, Bedford, Lynnfield, Medford, Watertown, Abington, Bellingham, Easton, Groton, Hamilton, Ashland and Hopkinton.

No school for the first six grades was announced for Arlington and Everett.

WHEN the little band of our American forefathers who constituted the Plymouth Colony had gathered in the frugal fruits of their labors, they reverently and humbly thanked God for what they had.

We should never become so accustomed to the blessings of our American life, or so burdened by its vicissitudes, as to neglect this ennobling duty which our faith imposes.

HOW PILGRIMS PRAYED ON FIRST THANKSGIVING DAY
Plymouth Residents In Revival of Historic Service

Let us surely pray, as President Roosevelt admonished us to do in his Thanksgiving proclamation, that God will:

"In the time of prosperity fill our hearts with thankfulness, and in the day of trouble suffer not our trust in Thee to fail."

It is a wonderful spirit in which the American people observe Thanksgiving.

Family groups are assembled, and the precious relationships of parent and child are renewed, and the cordial associations of friends are honored.

It is a beautiful and inspiring thing, that we can so gladly and completely lend ourselves to this traditional observance.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, as President Roosevelt also said, are composed of "multitudes brought hither out of many kindreds and tongues."

Of course many have come here as strangers, to our liberties and rights, and to our customs and traditions.

But they are not strangers long, to either our way of life or the glorified origin of that American way.

They become Americans.

They contribute to new generations of Americans.

And so naturally and inevitably our history and traditions become THEIR rightful heritage, to be honored and respected, loved and cherished by them as by us.

This beautiful American tradition of Thanksgiving and its faithful observance has been an incalculable factor in the achievement of unity and strength by our people.

If we had set up an exclusive society of those whose right it was to observe Thanksgiving because their blood strains ran back to the original observance, we would be an ill-assorted people.

If we made observance conform to the particular religious faith to which the Pilgrim Fathers adhered, and excluded all other faiths, we would be at poor ease in each other's company and would incite the suspicions and jealousies and prejudices which are so tragically familiar in most of the world but so happily unfamiliar in our free life and land.

That we accept people of all faiths and races into common enjoyment and possession of our beneficent way of life, requiring only fidelity to that way, is what makes us a people apart from all other people.

THANKSGIVING IS PROOF that we do this, for there were perhaps no Jews or Catholics or people of varied race and color among the Plymouth Pilgrims.

They were a narrow little band, in numbers and in faith.

But what was in their hearts was not narrow, but universal—the enlightening, enriching and noble instinct and expression of gratitude, humility and thanksgiving.

That instinct, which is deep within as Americans, we now express.

It is infinitely good that we do so, for the perpetuation of what is without price to us depends on the grace and dignity and sincerity with which we are able to acknowledge the Divine source of our blessings.

We should never neglect, in peace or in war, in time of plenty or of sore trial, the reverential duties which are this day performed, have always been and must always be.

On The Side

-s- By E. V. DURLING

MOTHER and daughter pictures, in which parent and child are dressed alike, seem very popular for magazine covers. How about some father and son pictures? What is a more appealing sight than to see a father and his young son striding along together? And a picture of this would be equally appealing. I urgently request a magazine cover picture of a lad and his dad titled: "The Men of the House."

CONFIDENTIAL: Cornell after having apparently defeated Dartmouth by a score of seven to three conceded the victory to its opponents because, due to a mistake of the referee, the winning touchdown had been made on a fifth down. Dartmouth accepted the victory. It goes into the football records as such. Everybody seems to agree it should. All right, then how about that count of 14 Gene Tunney enjoyed in his last bout with Dempsey? Shouldn't Mr. Tunney have conceded the victory to Dempsey? And even if he didn't doesn't the fact remain Dempsey did actually defeat Tunney and therefore regained his heavyweight title? . . . A native State of Mainer says best of all fireplace wood is hackmatack hunks. After that yellow birch, seasoned maple, oak or pine knots . . . Is said a three-year-old child should have a vocabulary of from 500 to 1500 words. If you have a three-year-old child, lady, you could hire a stenographer to take down what the kiddie says and check up on his or her vocabulary.

SIDELIGHTS: "You challenge your readers to name 12 famous and successful bald-headed Americans," writes a Detroiter. "I will name Edgar Bergen of Charlie McCarthy fame for one. When I think of the other 11 you will hear from me" . . . Take bathroom cabinets. They are too small. Things are always falling off the narrow shelves into the wash basin. Another thing; why not two bathroom cabinets to every bathroom. Why try to pack all the family's cleansing paraphernalia in one cabinet . . . Add collector's items for those interested in quaint postmarks: Adam, W. Va.; Eve, Ky.; Sunrise, Wyo.; Sundown, N. Y.; Midnight, Mo.; Twilight, S. D. . . . Each year on his birthday George Case of Redondo Beach, Cal., writes a poem. This is Mr. Case's 1940 poem:

I'm eighty-two years old today
And feelin' fine and dandy,
But every day in every way
I'm looking more like Ghandi.

-s- MY DAY

NEW YORK CITY, Tuesday—Yesterday was a busy day. First we said goodbye to a friend who is off on a Naval Reserve cruise and then I went up to spend an hour with Mrs. William Brown Meloney, an ever courageous and ever inspired friend.

Next I went to Mr. Douglas Chandor's studio on East 57th st. to see the portrait which he has painted of my daughter-in-law, Ruth, Elliott's wife. It is a charming portrait of a very charming young woman. He has caught her beauty and her sweetest expression, and there it is on canvas for her children to enjoy. We change with age, but beautiful portraits can remind us of the days when youth radiated its own special charm all about us.

THERE is a portrait at Hyde Park of my mother-in-law as a young woman, done by Pierre Troubetskoy, which is, I think, one of the most distinguished and beautiful paintings I have ever seen. It does full justice to a beauty which was then at its height.

Today, next to the portrait of Ruth, Mr. Chandor has a portrait of my mother-in-law. The beauty of the young woman is still apparent so many years later. The face today is gentler, less rigid, but the lines of the aristocrat are still in evidence in spite of the passage of years.

Next to the two family portraits, there stood a portrait of Mr. Herbert Hoover, which is as good as any I have seen. On the easel nearby, the portrait of a small boy with his shirt open at the neck was arresting and made one want to know the child.

After the studio visit came a little Christmas shopping and then lunch with my cousin, Mrs. Henry Parish. Here an hour melted away and left me surprised to discover that I should have been at our house in 65th street to meet the truck that was to take some cases of the President's papers up to Hyde Park.

At 4:15 I managed to come rather breathlessly into the Commodore Hotel to meet with some of the women who are taking part in forum discussion today at the Women's Centennial Congress. I am supposed to preside and keep them all talking. I only hope I shall do it as well as Dr. Wirth did in the Chicago University Forum on the air last Sunday.

We had a rather hurried dinner last night and then we went to the Columbia Broadcasting Company where, in an empty studio, a group of young people met to discuss a new organization—The Committee of Thirty Million Young People.

I think we could have spent many hours together and carried on an increasingly animated discussion about the function of youth organizations, but the studio in which we were, was needed at 10 o'clock, so we broke up and went about our various occupations.

ETHEL BARRYMORE

ETHEL BARRYMORE: Vincent Sheean, in whose first play Miss Barrymore starred last season has written another one—about the bombardment of London . . . WOLCOTT GIBBS: In reviewing "Cabin in the Sky" at the Martin Beck Theater you compared it with Marc Connelly's "Green Pastures" and said it's a pity that Connelly wasn't around to assist in this production. Well, Connelly had something to do with the script . . . BMI: Irving Berlin's "God Bless America," the ASCAP tune, which will be boycotted by the radio chains after Jan. 1, is being accepted by Britain as our national anthem. They prefer it instead of our official anthem, because Francis Scott Key wrote his song during a battle against the forces of England.

BEN COHEN: Your associate, Tommy Corcoran, now is in Mexico . . . JOSEPH PASTERNAK: Marlene Dietrich will be engulfed by legal documents this week in a law suit to be brought by Jack Forrester, the producer, who made "Generals Without Buttons." Marlene was under contract to make a picture for him in France and received an advance—hence the suit . . . HOUSE AND GARDEN: Jules Brulatour now feels that climbing the steps in his house is a waste of energy. He and his wife, Hope Hampton, therefore, are installing escalators in their home.

DIST. ATTY. O'DWYER: Buron Fitts' assistant, Williams—who is prosecuting "Bugsy" Siegel in the West Coast branch of Murder, Inc.—will come to N. Y. next month to obtain data for the trial in Los Angeles. Although Fitts was defeated in his campaign for re-election, Williams will be designated as special prosecutor to continue the case. He expects Reles to testify for him . . . SHIRLEY TEMPLE: Bill Robinson, who appeared with you in so many films, offered his services for a documentary short called "The Disinherited," made by Paul Husserl for the Children's Aid Society. It concerns Harlem and the slum children of the East Side. John Kieran is the narrator . . . EQUITY: Ed Wynn won't do Sunday shows. "An entertainer is the servant of the people," he insists, "and until the people demand it they shouldn't be educated to Sunday shows."

• • •

CORDELL HULL: John C. Wiley, who was the American Minister to Latvia until the Russians marched into that country, had to travel home via the long route—across Russia and the Orient. When he returned to Washington and went to the White House the President asked him what was the first typically American thing he saw after having traversed so many countries. "It was in San Francisco when our boat landed," said Wiley. "At the pier I saw a huge car pull up. The chauffeur wearing a Roosevelt button opened the door of the car—and out stepped a fashionable lady wearing a Willkie button. Then I was sure I was home . . ."

LUCIUS BEEBE: Maury Paul, who brought suit against Paramount—the company which paid you $500 for the use of the movie title "Cafe Society"—won his suit when he proved that he had been the first to use "Cafe Society" in his Cholly Knickerbocker column many years ago. The verdict gave Maury the right to collect a percentage of the film's profits. But he hasn't received a dime—because an examination of the books showed that the film lost money . . . HARRY HOPKINS: Bill Hardey of the Gay Nineties Cafe is presenting his prized possession—the flag which was nailed to the Maine when that battleship was sunk—to the Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park.

Particularly interesting, I think, are Gertrude Miller's ideas: "I can't agree that Gary Cooper is the perfect type for Robert Jordan. Preston Foster is more the type Hemingway describes. Paulette Goddard is an excellent choice for 'Maria' and Akim Tamiroff would be very good for 'Pablo,' don't you think? Last, but far from least, wouldn't Marjorie Rambeau be wonderful as Pilar?" One nice thing about Gertrude's suggestions is that most of her candidates are under contract to Para which would solve a hatful of problems

BRINDA'S impulse was to tell him that she had considerable—that she had often played chess with Sir John. Which would have been the truth . . . But involuntarily, and for no reason she could imagine, she found herself answering, "A little. It originated in India, did it not?"

Principal Characters in Today's Chapter

BRINDA, daughter of Mata Hari and ward of British intelligence chief.
PRINCE VASLAV, mysterious Russian nobleman who may be a Nazi spy.
LADY GLADYS, titled British woman who hates Brinda and loves Vaslav.

MATA HARI'S Daughter

By MAURICE DEKOBRA — LEYLA GEORGIE

The answer [illegible] Vaslav. She [illegible] "Chess is the queen," he said [illegible] our age and I believe I am a natural [illegible] And [illegible] queen, you will be [illegible] of the board."

A spot threw into [illegible] slender figures of [illegible] the symphony [illegible]

Standing [illegible] Vaslav, Brinda felt [illegible] disturbed and excited. There was an electric tension about [illegible]—a high-keyed sureness of power.

His voice spoke close to her ear. "It is an enchanting game, chess—a game of war. It is also a game of great strategy . . . It has beauty too, and even a little love in it. It is fitting that you should be the queen of such a game. Queen of the Chessboard Ballet!"

Was there some subtle undercurrent in his words? Brinda could not tell.

Then a servant spoke hurriedly in Russian to her host. Vaslav gave an exclamation of impatience.

"Your pardon," he said to Brinda.

Swiftly he strode from the room. Brinda saw the door close behind him. What happened beyond it, she could not know.

ANOTHER WOMAN?

She could not see the woman who cast herself into Vaslav's arms, half sobbing: "Darling, I couldn't stand it any longer—I had to see you—touch you—kiss your lips. Oh, darling, why didn't you call me? Is it another one—another woman?"

Had Brinda heard and seen this by-play, it would have profoundly altered her estimate of Vaslav. The more profoundly since the sobbing, love-shaken woman was none other than the ordinarily poised and haughty Lady Gladys Mountwyn.

Prince Vaslav's hand shot out, grasped the arm of the Mountwyn heiress.

"Out . . . et!" He divided the word into slow, fierce syllables.

Gladys gave a little gasp. "Don't—please! You're hurting me!"

He relaxed his grip. Looking intently into her eyes, he demanded, "Why did you come here tonight? I told you I was busy. Besides . . . it is dangerous."

"Dangerous? How?"

"You must know."

She shook her head.

"I don't care about that. Anyway, that's not the real reason why you told me to stay away! It's another woman. It always is . . . Who is it this time?"

Involuntarily Vaslav glanced toward the rehearsal room. He recovered himself.

"Never be jealous, my golden one. It is woman's least becoming frailty. But I shall prove your suspicions are, as usual, unjust. If you will wait only a little while, until I finish this rehearsal, I shall join you."

"Where?"

"Where but our usual place?" He beckoned to the skirted valet, "Ivan!"

Lady Gladys touched Vaslav's arm. "You promise?"

"Of course."

Silently the servant preceded her to the end of the hall. He touched a wall hanging and it moved aside, revealing a tiny house elevator. The man stood aside for Lady Gladys to pass. As the lift ascended the wall hanging fell back into place.

Vaslav returned thoughtfully to the rehearsal room. A few moments later he was explaining volubly to Brinda the significance of the numbered squares on the chessboard.

"It [illegible] rehearsal greatly," he said. "[illegible] remembering a series of moves, it is impossible to make a mistake. Of course [illegible] time, the [illegible] from [illegible] will be [illegible] other [illegible]

"[illegible] special." [illegible] But I am [illegible] even [illegible] others"—[illegible]—[illegible] They [illegible] it."

At the [illegible] of hour he abruptly [illegible] short. [illegible] where you [illegible] her [illegible] door. "There will be another rehearsal the day after tomorrow. May I count on you?"

"I suppose so," said Brinda, a little vaguely, her thoughts busy with the problem of her incalculable host.

"I will phone you to make sure. Good night . . . my premiere danseuse."

She sank back in the luxurious car cushions . . . Not until the car had gone several blocks did she notice that the chauffeur was not the one who had driven her before.

VASLAV'S RETREAT

Lady Gladys waited impatiently. This room was known to few of Prince Vaslav's visitors. It was a studio, private retreat on an upper floor, so rumored that no sign of it was visible from the stairs or hall. It contained a desk, books in a half dozen languages, an immense burnished geographical globe, a small piano, and a broad low lounge, luxuriously deep.

"Quite a long rehearsal!" she said acidly as Vaslav entered.

Without answering, he picked up an intercommunicating phone affixed to a low table beside the lounge. He spoke rapidly into the transmitter—in Russian.

"What did you say?" asked Gladys as he hung up.

Vaslav smiled.

"Only that I am not to be disturbed."

He disposed his strong, supple figure carelessly on the divan, ordering gently, "A cigarette, my dear."

Lady Gladys drew a sharp breath. For a moment she stood motionless, her head lifted haughtily. Then she obeyed.

"A light."

She held the flame close.

Vaslav exhaled a careful ring of smoke, removed the cigarette, and with his free hand drew her face to his. Their lips merged in a long kiss.

"Do you know" he said, "your hair is very beautiful in this light?"

"Do you know," Gladys replied, "you are the most heartless, unscrupulous, fascinating man in London!"

Vaslav laid the cigarette aside. "Nonsense, my darling. I am only a very simple fellow, who penetrated your pose of British hauteur. I knew at once that you were a most human, a most voluptuous woman . . . and that in spite of your attempt to impersonate an austere society snob! So I made love to you, like a sensible man; and like a normal woman, you responded."

"But to you love me?" The voice of the Mountwyn heiress strove to be casual. The attempt was not a signal success. She went on, "You [illegible] me so, darling, you are a mysterious—and there are many other women . . . there WAS a new one tonight, wasn't there?"

Vaslav laughed outright.

"Yes, my dear, there was a new one, and I can thank you for making her acquaintance. She is your charming friend Brinda Duncan, whom your excellent fiance, the good Lieutenant Malden, also seems to find most attractive. I am giving her the principal part in the Chessboard Ballet."

Gladys sprang to her feet.

"No! I won't have it! That nameless creature from nowhere! Oh, I might have known it! I could see she intrigued you from the start . . . that's her special gift. Even in school she had the boys making fools of themselves. And now you!"

"Compose yourself, my golden one," soothed Vaslav. "Your friend Brinda interests me only because she is really a marvelous dancer and, even more, because she may be extremely useful."

"Useful! How do I know that you just don't think of me as 'useful,' too?"

"You are useful, my sweet," said Vaslav, "but useful in a different way."

THE PRINCE DECLINES

For a while there was no more speech. Then: "Vassie, darling, why must you go on with this strange way of living? Why can't we go to America . . . anywhere . . .? It it's a question of money, you know I have enough—more than we'll ever need."

Vaslav shook his head.

"No, my love; there are things you do not understand. Besides, think how it would devastate your so-charming Mr. Malden!"

"Dick Malden! Why do you keep talking of him, darling? You know I haven't cared a snap for him since I met you. And . . . I'm going to tell him so. I'm going to break my engagement to Dick! Do you hear?"

"You are going to do nothing of the kind," said Vaslav imperturbably.

"Why shouldn't I?"

"Because," stressed Vaslav, "it isn't going to be necessary."

Lady Gladys stared at him a long time.

"Oh, Vassie . . . you beast! I don't know whether to hate you or love you."

"That will [illegible]," said Vaslav, pulling her down to him, again . . .

AN AIR RAID

Big Ben was booming out midnight as the car turned into Chester st. Above the solemn tone of the historic time-piece, Brinda was abruptly aware of another, less peaceful sound, a pervading moan, rising steadily in key until it became an ear-piercing shriek. Then, somewhere in the distance, the dull, reiterated cough of anti-aircraft fire.

The car came to an abrupt, jolting, stop. In the dim rays of the masked headlights, there appeared an Air Raid Precaution warden.

"Pull to one side!" he ordered. "Put out your lights!" Then, seeing Brinda, he put a hand to his helmet. "Sorry, Miss . . . It's a raid. Orders are for traffic to halt till we get the 'All clear.' Better take shelter yourself—there's a good one—hardly anyone in it—under the building at the corner." He opened the car-door. "I'll show you the way. The blighters are bombing in force."

After a moment's hesitation, Brinda, with a murmured "Thanks-so-much," accepted. En route to the shelter, she remembered the chauffeur. But he was a dark shadow in the lightless car, apparently resolved to remain at his wheel.

The A. R. P. warden relinquished her arm as they reached the blue light.

"Hello," said a voice, as she started down the stairs. Brinda thrilled with surprise and pleasure.

"Dick!"

CONTEST EDITOR'S CORNER

Well folks, here I am again! And this time I want to thank all those people who have written in to say how much they're enjoying our contest. We've received vast loads of letters saying what a kick you folks are getting out of the cartoons and the questions.

Well, that's not the idea of the game. You're supposed to enjoy it . . . We're trying to show you a good time while you try for those big prizes. Of course the cartoons are humorous and of course some of the alternate answers are funny. (They ought to be, cause we certainly tried to make 'em so!)

You see, this contest does not only offer you the opportunity to win a cash fortune —but also, to have a good time while you're at it. And all those cards we've been receiving certainly make us very happy because now we KNOW you're having a good time and enjoying the Game of Check!

And so to you folks who've written in to tell us what a good time you're having playing the Game of Check, again many thanks! It certainly is swell hearing from some of you and getting those nice, cheery notes.

BROCKTON, Nov. 27—A few minutes after Albert Kwiowski, 19, of North Carey st., had told his mother he was going rabbit shooting today, he was dead from the accidental discharge of a gun.

The mother, Mrs. Stephanie Kwiowski, watched her son go to the barn, heard the report of a gun and saw him stumble out into the snow and fall. Shot through the right side of his chest, he died before police arrived.

Medical Examiner Dr. P. H. Leavitt pronounced the shooting accidental. Kleinowski, a newsboy and student at a vocational school, is survived by his father, mother, four brothers and three sisters.

$125,000 Blaze In New Bedford

NEW BEDFORD, Nov. 27—The lives of a dozen firemen were imperilled here today when the heavy roof of the Allen Theater caved in at the height of a $125,000 blaze that burned through a whole city block.

The fire started in the projection room of the empty theater, firemen said, swept through the huge building and ate into a block of a dozen adjoining stores.

Two alarms called out all the fire-fighting apparatus in the city. The falling snow and the sweep of the flames held firemen back. Several walls, as well as the roof, collapsed.

RULES GOVERNING THE FOOTBALL CONTEST

NO. 10

The object of the Daily Record-American Football Contest, is to select winners of 17 collegiate football games to be played each Saturday. Anyone may enter the contest excepting employees of the Record-American and their families.

The selections are listed on the chart here which is ready to be filled out by the contestant. Simply place an (X) in the space nearest the name of the team you think will win or if you predict a tie game place the letter (T) in the spaces nearest the names of the tying teams.

Calculate the AVERAGE score of all competing teams, except that for which you predict a tie score. Write winners and losers average score in space provided in coupon. Do not write individual scores in spaces or on the coupon. Indicate average scores only by adding scores of all teams and then dividing the total by the number of teams competing.

Only ONE solution may be entered by a contestant. All entries must be in the office of the Record-American not later than Midnight Friday the day before the games.

You need not buy a copy of the Record or American to enter this contest. Tracings of the contest form may be made from copies in the public library or the Record-American office. Such entries will be acceptable and given equal consideration with those clipped from these newspapers.

A prize of $100.00 will be awarded the person whose entry contains all selections correct. If more than one person submits perfect solutions $100.00 will be awarded the tying contestant whose average score tabulations most nearly match with actual average scores on the games. If no perfect list of solutions is entered $50.00 will be awarded to the contestant having the nearest number of selections correct and should two or more contestants tie for this prize the tying contestant submitting the most nearly correct average score will receive the prize. Twenty-five awards of $3.00 each will be given the twenty-five contestants whose entries contain in succession, the next largest number of correct solutions and whose average scores most nearly match the actual scores of the games.

30 ADDITIONAL PRIZES

30 games of "Hit That Line," newest craze on the entertainment horizon, will be awarded, one each, to the 30 runners-up to the cash prize winners. "Hit That Line" is played according to the general rules of football.

Winners of each week's contest will be announced on the Monday, nine days after the game. The decision of the judges in all cases shall be final.

Mail all entries to the Record-American Football Contest Editor P. O. Box 1897, Boston, Mass.

In the event of postponement of any of the games, such games will automatically be excluded from the contest. In the event that the planned date of any game scheduled is changed, then that game is automatically excluded.

AUSTEN LAKE

Sugar Bowl Appeals To B.C.'s Sweet Tooth

PRESUPPOSING THAT B. C. WILL ADD the Crusader's suit of armour to its 1940 football exhibit of Waves, Tigers, Typhoons and Hurricanes, my two cents worth would be, "Take the Sugar Bowl bid and let the Rose Bowl wait till next year." These things should be taken in stride!

AUSTEN LAKE

B. C. has the Cotton Bowl under its belt The Sugar daddies of New Orleans have hoo-hooed a tentative "wudja"—IF?—a suggestive "Pssst" and an undercover crook of the finger. B. C., presumably, can have that one! For the Southern press has been printing gosh-and-gee-whizz stories about "the biggest, best balanced, brainy bunch of bone busters in the boreal North." The publicity approach is prepared. Also the Orange folk of Florida have asked options.

But the Rose Bowlers have maintained vast gobs of silence! Only a few whispers of B. C.'s prowess have percolated out there! The Rosies are percentage people!

B. C. is silent, too! Any attempt to talk Bowl to Jack Curley, Frank Leahy or any of the official football family begets pained expressions, little quotation (") marks between the eyes and puckered (o) lips like the tied tops of potato sacks. Bowl chat is taboo! There's man's work to be done first! For B. C. isn't "presupposing" H. C.!

There are three hazards ahead before this New Year's idyll. (1) the emotional uplift which a B. C.-H. C. underdog always carries into the contest. (2) the nod of the Bowl committee, and (3) the final decision of the reverend hilltop fathers. For last year B. C. didn't grab hungrily at the Cotton Bowl yoo-hoo and rush down without fresh laundry, a tooth brush and a change of socks. The Heights committee sat down calmly with fingers to forehead and said "Mmmmmmm!" for a while, weighed advantages vs. drawbacks and finally said, "Well, travel is broadening, human contacts are educational, a scenic change is refreshing . . . why not?" Like that!

H. C. All for B. C.—Except on Saturday.

IT'S AN ODD SITUATION SATURDAY. For the H. C. kids' collegiate feelings are fraternally fixed on B. C., second only to their own rose-brick buildings and terraced grounds. Boston's large quota of H. C. alumni have hollered the mucous membranes off their larynxes at B. C. games this fall. From the puniest H. C. freshman to the portliest H. C. old boy, the Purple would like to see B. C. go South or West and help the custard filling out of any Bowl opponent.

But just the same H. C. is busing up to Boston Saturday with the fixed intention of busting B. C.'s dream bubble into a soapy mist of possible! The very thing H. C. and B. C. men unitedly wish for . . . a B. C.

Rain and rising temperatures following the heavy snowfall today threatened to disrupt the school football schedule for tomorrow. Heading the list of Turkey Day Ivy classics is the English-Public Latin series at the Beehive

STARTED IN 1888

English, the oldest high school in the country, and Latin, the oldest public school in the country, meet for the 53rd time. It was on Nov. 19, 1888, that these institutions began warring on each other and have been going at it ever since.

That first meeting, which took place at Franklin Park, was taken by Latin by the overwhelming margin of 38 to 0. The following year, English won, 10 to 4. And from that point on, the double blue has been having the upper hand.

ENGLISH FAVORED

To date English is out in front of their rivals in the matter of games won and lost. Down through the years they have subdued their opponents 22 times. Latin has been successful in 19 games. Eleven others were tied.

The Double Blue, undefeated in city competition for the past three years, enters tomorrow's battle a favorite to topple the Dark Purple for the 23rd time. But, in these meetings, it is more appropriate to make both the underdog.

COMMERCE VS. DORCHESTER

Supporting the English-Latin game will be the High School of Commerce vs. Dorchester battle. This game follows at 11 o'clock.

The record between the two now has the Red and Black of Dorchester out front with ten wins to seven for Doc Fleming's pen and pencil boys with two ties thrown in.

Commerce rules a slight favorite to win

Next in line for traditional Turkey Day meat is Medford and Malden. These schools will go at it for the 52d time, theirs starting in the year of 1889. Although neither eleven is in any way, in the battle for the eastern Mass. schoolboy state honors, it does hold enough interest to be next in the matter of attendance.

The Golden Tornado holds a two-game edge in victories, 23 to 21 for Medford.

RINDGE VS. SOMERVILLE

Rindge Technical and Somerville hold the show position in the line for traditional clashes. Both schools locked horns way back in 1893 which makes this season's battle the 48th meeting.

This series as well as the two already mentioned, has been closely contested year in and year out. The Technicians hold the edge by but one game, 18 to 17 for Somerville

Newton and Brookline, battling at the former's grounds, will be notching their 44th game. This series started a year later than the Rindge-Somerville but they missed up some where.

Moving outside Greater Boston, is the Leominster-Fitchburg classic which will be observing their 56th anniversary. A peculiar thing about these two schools, is that they began relationships in 1894, five years after English and Latin got together, yet they are ahead in the matter of games played there.

This all can be traced to the fact that Leominster and Fitchburg made it an early practice of playing each other twice a year.

Lowell and Lawrence also come in for a share of the traditional limelight. They decided to match wits in 1894 also. Tomorrow's clash will be their 44th.

VICTORY OVER GLOUCESTER WILL GIVE PEABODY TITLE

By SAM BROGNA

When the some odd 100 schools take to the gridiron tomorrow morning in the annual Thanksgiving Day battles, four of these will be fighting to succeed Brockton, long the schoolboy champion, as the 1940 Eastern Massachusetts title holders.

SCHOLASTIC O'ROURKE. Norm Ely, Lynn English passer, warms up for climactic test with rival Lynn Classical tomorrow. Game has bearing on state championship, so that Ely must indeed be sharp.

This quartet—Peabody, Everett and the two Lynn teams, English and Classical, all will be out to do or die in their respective games.

Doing their rush to the top of the ladder they have taken into camp both Lynn Classical and English. A win for Peabody, regardless of how the two other North Shore representatives make out—they play each other—automatically makes it the new schoolboy champion.

SLIM CHANCE FOR EVERETT

But, should the Tanners go down before the upsurging Fishermen and Classical takes its city rivals English, the title goes to Classical.

And what about Everett? Where does Coach Dennis Gildea's team come in?

The only chance the Big Red has of winning top honors for the 1940 grid semester is a win over Chelsea and—a loss for both Peabody and Lynn Classical.

But, the Everett at Chelsea game has been called off because of snow. The school heads are to meet sometime late today to decide on a later date.

And now, where does Lynn English come into the grid picture?

Coach Tom Whelan's Delancyless eleven, which, up till last week, had a better than even chance to win, has only to defeat Classical with Chelsea and Gloucester coming to its aid by topping their opponents.

PEABODY BEAT LYNN TEAMS

A lot of controversy is expected to arise should Peabody be declared the new champion, overlooking, entirely the three other schoo's which are supposedly rated in higher brackets.

How can one go so far as to make either English or Classical or even Everett the successor to Brockton, when all three have at least lost one with English and Everett both being tied once?

The only way to knock the Tanners out of the picture entirely is to have Gloucester win. Outside this, they rightfully own the State title.

Classical has dropped but one; that to Peabody early in the season. Since, however, it has come along to win eight in a row. Some of its victims have been Everett, Leominster, both of which have lost this only contest, Lowell and Newton.

Peabody, after bowling over its first seven opponents, all in impressive fashion, met a tartar in Salem High a couple of weeks ago. In this game, the Witches held the Tanners to a scoreless deadlock on an off field.

During the course of the campaign, Coach Bill Seeglitz's team has been and still is, the only school eleven team in the entire state to be scored on.

ALL-SCHOLASTIC. That's what Lynn Classical adherents are calling star tackle, Joe Sucharewicz, above. Joe will do best to check Lynn English in tomorrow's classic.

Quincy Fans Object To Time of Title Tilt

By MICHAEL GILLOOLY

There'll be more than one clash at the Quincy Municipal Stadium tomorrow morning, when Quincy and North Quincy High School elevens struggle for the Granite championship—the only title left for them on the South Shore since Weymouth started its grand clean-up.

The game will get underway at 11 a. m., an hour later than usual, and the protests are flying thick and heavy against the tardy start.

Local clergymen recently objected to the 10 o'clock starting time with the idea that the grid game was drawing from church attendance. So the authorities decided to compromise by moving the clash up an hour, with the intention of satisfying everybody.

QUINCY FAVORED

Football fans immediately started a controversy, stating that the change affected their well planned and long established Thanksgiving Day dinner hours. Veteran grid followers have worked up their appetites cheering their local favorites and refuse to break their custom of years standing.

Thus, the battle rages.

Meanwhile Quincy High will enter the game the usual favorite. Coach Munroe McLean's boys boasting a weight advantage, again loom as the probable winners. But they haven't heard from Coach Jack Donohue's crowd as yet.

Last year, the kids from the other side of the track were heavily outweighed, apparently outclassed and, all in all, our in left field as far as Quincy was concerned. Then little North turned in one of the upsets of the season by tipping its rival for its sweetest victory.

The same could happen this campaign. The North Quincy boys may go out and win for their ailing coach.

Meanwhile, the distribution of the greater title will take place at the Legion Field Wednesday where Harry Arianson's undefeated and untied eleven clashes with an inferior Hingham outfit for the South Shore championship. And unless the Weymouth backs start running the wrong way, they're a cinch to romp to their ninth victory.

TOUCHDOWN TWINS

Weymouth's touchdown twins, George Delorey and Frank Cavello, should wind up a most successful campaign in a scoring blaze. Hingham has lost seven straight and holds little hope of hindering the scoring sprees.

Hingham Bill Cronin feels his chances of breaking into the scoring column on Capt Dick Sanborn.

Scituate high, with five straight victories tucked under its belt will face a stiff obstacle when playing host to Marshfield in the annual mix-up. Coach Eddie Stewart's crew are looking forward to this triumph and should not be disappointed.

Other annual clashes which will draw their share of the spotlight pit Cohasset and Hanover, Abington and Whitman; and Milton and Braintree.

Fordham in Stiff Workout for N. Y. U.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (INS)—Fordham's Rams were taking a very serious view today of Saturday's game with the hapless Violets of New York University. Coach Crowley had the whole Fordham squad out for hard practice to keep the men in condition and get them attuned to N. Y. U. plays as displayed by the scrubs.

Brockton's Duel With Waltham Lacks '39 Spark

BROCKTON, Nov. 27—Meeting in a game which decided the schoolboy championship last year but which will be one of the two to be played on the Thanksgiving Day holiday tomorrow morning, Brockton's downtrodden defending titlists, have met Waltham here at Keith's Park.

Neither team has lived up to pre-season expectations, each having been better than expected.

The Shoe City eleven knocked down from the pinnacle they have occupied for the last decade, has won five and dropped four, a record that no Brockton team has chalked up since way back in the early twenties. Nevertheless, they are favored to tip over the Watch City team with a record of three wins, three losses and three ties.

Arlington and Melrose high schools renew their grid relations tomorrow morning at the Pierce Field gridiron, Arlington. This series goes back to 1912, when they first met.

The Spy Ponders, with Capt. Art Blanchard and Louie Brillante leading the attack, are heavy favorites to win over the Hocus-pocus eleven which has lost the same number of games as Arlington—two.

Ridge Tech and Somerville, not going anywhere in a huff so far as schoolboy titular honors are concerned but will be out just to continue its relationship for another year, meet for the 48th time tomorrow morning at Tufts Oval, Somerville.

Because of the larger than usual turnout which is expected this game sales, school officials decided to switch the contest to the oval in lieu of the original site, Dilboy Field.

Both teams have chosen experiencing poor seasons. The Technicians, which will rule a slight favorite have won but three games out of seven played, and Somerville, under its new mentor, Luciano, broke into the win column but twice.

A capacity gathering is assured for the 41th annual meeting between Brookline and Newton on the holiday morning.

The game this year will take place at Newton's home grounds.

Bruce Smith Named Gophers Captain

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 27 (INS)—Bruce Smith, junior left halfback who shared starring honors with George Franck in undefeated Minnesota's backfield this season, will captain the 1941 Gophers.

International News Service Sports Writer

Speed, power and deception abound in the mythical All-New England small college football team compiled today by International News Service from selections sent in by coaches of the various elevens and sport writers.

Selections were so wide open that only Providence College placed more than one man in the first team. Charlie Avedisian, stout, powerful, 210-pound tackle, who plays the backfield equally well for Coach Hughie Devore, walked the road to glory with Joe Sullivan, high-speed pass-careening end. Avedisian made several small New England college "all" teams last year.

The backfield of Walter Domina of the Norwich Cadets, 'Duke' Abruzzi of Rhode Island State, Bob Blood of Amherst and Jim Carrier of Wesleyan is an overwhelming choice of the men who guide the teams and the boys who write about them.

BLOOD VERSATILE

"Andy" Domina is a swivel-hipped tactician with what his coach, Dan McAllister, terms "psychic or mathematical perception" of the ability of a runner to sense beforehand where a tackler is going to be. Joe Duke" of South Kingston, R. I., is a 160-pound brilliant climax runner.

Blood is hard-hitting and hard-charging, as Harvard discovered. Carrier, a powerful line bucker, sparked his Connecticut eleven to the Little Three championship last year and toted the ball well this season. This backfield would answer any coach's dream.

Warner Keaney, 210 pound son of Rhode Island State Coach Frank Keaney, was rated as one of the outstanding kickers of the country this season. His kicks sometimes travelled 80 yards in the air. Young Keaney's brilliant exhibition against Brown was the greatest one-man gridiron show ever staged in Rhode Island.

He scored one touchdown, passed to Abruzzi for another, place-kicked two conversions, place-kicked a 37-yard field goal, got away marvelous punts and just missed a 46 yard field goal in the final minute which would have tied a 20 to 17 score.

However, he was overshadowed in the voting by the more flashy running and elusive backfield men. Along with Sullivan, an outstanding choice for end was Roger Stearns of University of Maine.

A score of candidates vied for the tackle positions. However, Flaherty of the New Hampshire Wildcats and Avedisian edged out all the others.

PAPANOS WELL LIKED

Papanos of Connecticut University was the almost unanimous choice for guard, with Erickson of Northeastern runner-up for the other side of the line.

United States Coast Guard Academy, hailed as "the team to watch next season," brought out the center of this season, O'Neil. However, O'Neil was closely pursued by Daley of Williams. Another Daley, Jim of Colby, was just behind Northeastern's Erickson for guard. Briggs of Maine's Black Bears, however, trailed Papanos, J. Daley and Erickson.

Two western Massachusetts players, Smythe, of Amherst, and Grant, of Springfield, placed on the second eleven at tackle.

Henry Sinski, the plugging defensive end and pass-catcher from Gardiner, who stars for Lowell and aspires to be a leading textile chemist, and Norwich's high scoring pass-snatching end Liebel just lost out for the first team behind Stearns and Sullivan.

Ed Barrows, son of Maine's Governor Lewis O. Barrows; O'Grady, whose run beat St. Anslem's for American International at Springfield last year, upsetting the Hawks; Donnelly of University of Connecticut and Harrison of Tufts, were crowded into the second backfield by the star "first" quartet.

No Winter Deal Likely For Crosetti

By SID MERCER

Though five American League clubs have manifested willingness to offer employment to Frankie Crosetti next season, a good guess is that Frankie will stick to the colors he defended so gallantly for 10 years—at least until after championship play is well under way.

Unless the draft sweeps up Phil Rizzutto—which now seems unlikely — the little fellow from Queens, generally designated as Crosetti's successor, will open the season at short for the Yankees if he passes the St. Petersburg examinations with high marks—and everybody says he knows the answers.

FIELDING QUESTION

Crosetti, however, will not be disposed of until Rizzutto is a certainty to be with the Yanks all season—and until Phillip shows enough to take over the shortfield assignment.

That should depend on his fielding. He hit well for two years in the American Association and, even allowing for a natural slump against big league pitching, he still figures to be a far better hitter than Crosetti.

Rizzutto will undoubtedly be tried out in the lead-off spot in the Florida rehearsals. That was Crosetti's batting order niche for several years.

Joe Gordon took over that position last August and sparked the Yanks in their amazing September drive. However, a guy who delivers around 23 home runs a season is more valuable in one of the clean up spots, so it is doubtful if Gordon will continue as top man.

Tommy Holmes, up from Newark after four years of schooling on Yankee farm clubs, is another lead-off possibility if he can master the grade.

Holmes is an outfielder and a left-handed hitter. He will find George Selkirk and Tommy Henrich disputing his invasion of the Yankee outfield.

Stockholders Back Nugent

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27 (INS)—No matter what anybody else may think, the stockholders of the Philadelphia National League Baseball Club believe Gerald P. Nugent is tops as president and that the club management is okay.

The stockholders (and it's their money that's being spent) had demonstrated this today by giving Nugent and his fellow-officers a vote of confidence at a meeting yesterday. Nugent and all the other officers were re-elected.

Nugent at once announced that Doc Prothro, manager of the last place Phillies, would be given a new contract to continue.

A minority group of stockholders who have been demanding that something be done to or with the Phillies attended the meeting, but no fireworks resulted.

B. C. Spirit Hailed As Vital Element In Team's Success

By BILL GRIMES

Before the current football campaign swung into atction, the skeptics predicted that Head Coach Frank W. Leahy's Boston College Eagles would be victims of "senioritis."

They argued that B. C. was represented by a senior studded squad. In their opinions, "Chucking" Charlie O'Rourke, "Hammering" Hank Toczylowski, Chet Gladchuk, Gene Goodreault, Joe Manzo, George Kerr, Joe Zabilski, John Yauchoes, Lou Montgomery, Al Lukachik, Walter Dubzinski, Dave White, Ed Twiss, Tom Mahan, Tony Tassinari and Frank Galvani had had their fill of varsity football, particularly the regulars and those who had played in the Cotton Bowl game against Clemson.

"WHO'S AFRAID?" Frank Gaziano, H. C. guard, has been hearing a lot about B. C.'s All-America tackles, but he says he'll show up at Fenway Park Saturday.

At any other college in the country the skeptics might have called the turn.

But, as everyone in the land knows, the Eagles are one of five major colleges boasting of a perfect season.

And why were the skeptics wrong?

Because they failed to take into consideration the Boston College spirit.

With all due respect to Frank Leahy, Ed McKeever, Johnny Druzand Joe McArdle, the principal factor behind the Eagles' success on the gridiron this fall has been the Boston College spirit.

RUINED BY SENIORITIS

The B. C. machine was built by Frank Leahy and his aides. It is really a masterpiece, a sound and perfectly co-ordinated unit.

But it has been operated NOT by the coaches, but by the BOSTON COLLEGE SPIRIT.

Under the most ideal conditions football is a grind. And, it's no wonder that so many teams are ruined every season by senior complexes. The undefeated and untied Cornell squad was hit by "senioritis" just before its game with Yale and set up a new all time record by losing two games in five days.

There's no institution of learning in this country at which football is played under more adverse conditions than it is at Boston College. In the first place, Boston College is a "day school." There are no dormitories and so campus life is restricted to school hours. There isn't even a gymnasium at "The Heights."

Just compare the conditions at Boston College with those at Harvard, Dartmouth, Yale, Princeton and, yes, even B. U. or with any college. It should be a simple matter to develop morale at colleges or universities where there are field houses, gymnasiums and dormitories. But, no college can boast of the spirit of the Eagles, despite the fact that they have acquired it the hard way.

SPIRIT WON GAMES

Coach Leahy has the greatest confidence in his seniors. And, needless to say, the veterans have the highest admiration for their coach and his assistants.

B. C. will start at least six and possibly eight seniors on Saturday against Holy Cross. But, there will not be the slightest indication on the part of any senior that he is all fed up on football.

True, they'll be out there with from three to five underclassmen fighting for Capt. "Hammering" Hank Toczylowski and Head Coach Frank Leahy but their main objective will be a victory for Boston College.

And, bear in mind, you can't beat a team which refuses to be licked.

Snow Covers Course At Meadowbrook C.C.

DETROIT, No. 27 (AP)—Difficult running conditions appeared certain today to face the top-ranking cross-country runners of the nation in tomorrow's National Amateur Athletic Union 10,000-meter run.

Four inches of snow covered the course laid out at the Meadowbrook Country Club near Detroit, and officials said that even if it melted before the start of the race at 2:30 p. m. (E.S.T.) Thursday the going would be muddy.

Nelson, Massey Meet in Portland

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 27 (AP)—Matchmaker Chick Hayes said today he had paired Frankie Nelson of Portland and Harvey Massey of New Orleans, Negro middleweights, for the feature bout on a Dec. 5 boxing card at the exposition building. It will be over the 10-round route.

Baseball Executive's Wife Passes Away

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 27 (AP)—Mrs. Mary Catherine Trautman, 48, wife of George M. Trautman, president of the American Association of professional Baseball Clubs, died today after a year's illness.

Mrs. Trautman was a sister of Frank Crummit, stage and radio entertainer.

Gene Fined $15 for Killing Dog

STAMFORD, Ct. Nov. 27 (AP)—Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion, was fined $15 and costs today by City Court Judge Daniel E. Ryan after he pleaded guilty to a charge of failure to report the killing of a dog.

The prosecution charged that Tunney, driving from his home here to New York on Nov. 7, ran over a greyhound dog, valued by its owner, Mrs. W. L. Johnstone, at $500 and did not report the incident.

EASY TO LOOK AT. Franny Lee, New Haven boy, who will captain Harvard on gridiron next year. His selection was something of a surprise. Chubby Peabody and Loren MacKinney were expected to be 1-2 in the running.

YALE BOYHOOD GOAL OF HARVARD CAPTAIN

The son of a Yale graduate of the class of 1905 and a former Eli rooter, Franny Lee, has been chosen the 1941 Harvard football captain to succeed Joseph Gardella of Arlington.

Strangely enough, Lee was born about a block away from the Yale bowl where he still lives and went to New Haven High school with the idea of going to Yale. But Fran says, "I finally decided to go to Harvard when I was a student at Choate. I decided then because I had had enough of New Haven."

The new Crimson captain played in the Yale Bowl twice before his sensational performance last Saturday when he ran the Yales dizzy to the tune of 28-0. Franny was a member of the high school team which played West Haven for the city championship. Charley Spreyer, was a member of the rival team. As a member of the Harvard cubs, Lee played a major role in downing the Bulldogs in a Bowl game.

DAD WENT TO YALE

Franny, a quiet, popular student has three brothers and a sister. His sister is older and two of his brothers were cross-country stars at Notre Dame. All of his family were in the Bowl on Saturday as Lee stole the honors not far from his front yard.

It is a good thing for Harvard football that Franny got a little tired of his home town where his father is a lawyer. Lee was a good friend of Delaney Kiputh, a guard on the Bulldog team and the son of the Eli's swimming coach, and came within a whisker of going to Yale.

Franny says that when he was a little shaver he used to sneak into the Yale practice sessions and watch them perform, always having the feeling that some day he would be playing for Yale.

Both at New Haven High school and at Choate, Lee was a star athlete and seems destined to be one of the leading Harvard backs in the last decade.

SURPRISED BY ELECTION

A question and answer quizz with the new captain:

Q—What did you think when you were elected captain?

A—I was very surprised.

Q—What kind of team is Harvard going to have next year?

A—It would be hard to predict, but I hope that we pick up right where we left off this year. (Lee stared at Dick Harlow as he spoke.)

Q—Was your 78 yard run against Yale your biggest football thrill?

A—No, that was only incidental. Joe Gardella's first touchdown gave me more of a thrill.

Dean Tests Mat Angel At Arena

The Angel, christened Maurice Tillet 38 years ago in France, will go out to retain his world's heavyweight wrestling championship tomorrow night at the Arena, and rooting for him from a front seat seat will be Professor Hooton of Harvard, famed scientist who made a complete study of The Angel when he first came here.

The Angel will oppose "Man Mountain" Dean.

The "Man Mountain" feels he's going to win the title and he has plenty of fans backing him.

When the Angel first came to this country, Professor Hooton and others were anxious to examine him. They set their calipers over his large sized head and they were amazed at his measurements. Since then Professor Hooton, at every possible opportunity has gone to see The Angel wrestle.

Both men have been training for the bout for a week and the big-headed champion pronounces himself in tip-top condition. And so does Dean.

The bout will be settled in one fall only.

In the semi-final, the new sensation, Tommy O'Toole, big Irish boy, will attempt to continue his winning streak when he faces Joe Cox, rough house star from Kansas City. Preliminaries include Pat Beel, nephew of the former world's champion, vs. Joe Maynard; Hibber McCoy vs. Leo Numa, and Chris Zaharias vs. Jack Wagner.

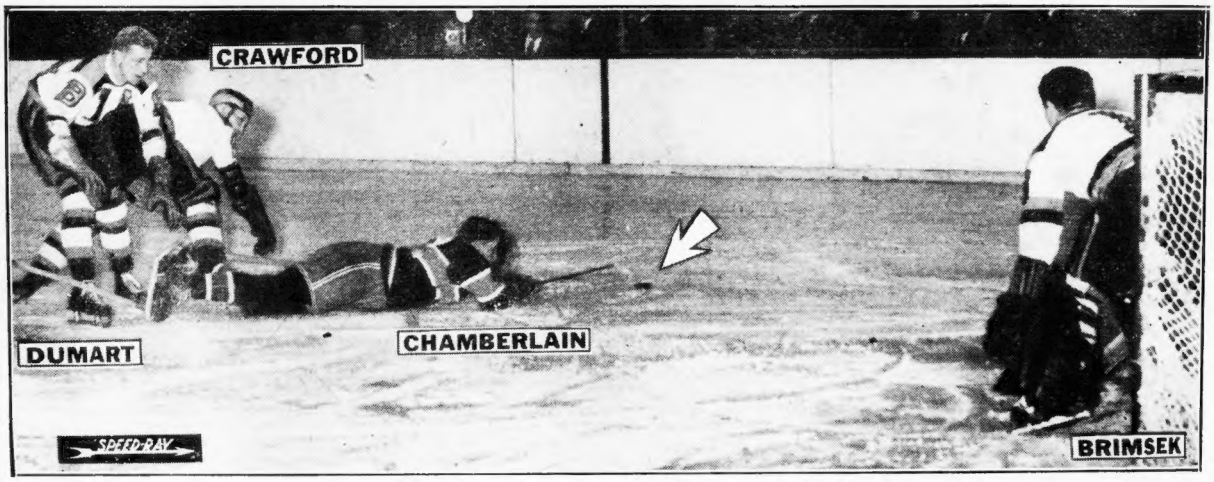
PORTLAND'S GOAL BEATS BRUINS, 3 TO 2



STOPPED—Murph Chamberlain of Les Canadiens found Woody Dumart and Jack Crawford of Bruins pretty tough customers to break through to get at Goalie Brimsek and wound up flat on the ice. But with plenty of the "old college try," Chamberlain tried to reach the puck while full length on his stomach. The Bruins were whipped, 3 to 2, when Big Jack Portland dented the strings in the third period of a "Donnybrook" affair at the Garden with the Flying Frenchmen's third and final goal.

By BILL GRIMES

For sixty playing minutes at the Garden, the scrappiest Les Canadiens since the days of Sprague Cleghorn and Billy Coutu out body checked and outsmarted the battling Bruins and were awarded a 3 to 2 decision.

Big Jack Portland, who was sold down the river by the Bruins a year ago and who was recently turned over to Frank Patrick by the Chicago Blackhawks, scored what proved to be the deciding goal, 35 seconds after the first face-off in the third period.

At the time that Big Jack tallied the Flying Frenchmen were a goal up on the Bruins and his marker didn't appear to be very important, but later on in that chapter Eddie Wiseman counted for the Rossmen and then the Portland goal came into its own.

Jack Portland, who was a great favorite with the fans while he wore a Bruin uniform, was tendered an ovation after he had scored. He counted on a solo dash down the right wing boards deep into Boston territory and on a beautiful angle shot.

"Toe" Blake and Jack Quilty scored for Les Canadiens in the first period and Roy Conacher rifled home the initial Bruin tally in the same stanza. The second period was fast and at times furious, but there was no scoring and then came the Portland and Wiseman markers in the final chapter.

• • •

Ray Gatcliffe has been handicapped by a lame back all season but he turned in a fine performance . . . Last night was the first time that Dick Irvin ever handled a hockey club here alone. Judging from last night's result, he works better alone . . . The Flying Frenchmen will be in town until Friday . . . They'll practice here today and tomorrow and may have a short workout Friday.

• • •

Ken Reardon never saw a pro game until he joined Les Canadiens . . . Little Bobby Bauer threw a block at Big Jack Portland and Big Jack retaliated by tossing the midget's stick into the corner . . . Dick Irvin uses a veteran on each of his three lines . . . The youngsters held their positions well and did some clever back checking.

• • •

After mixing it up with Woodie Dumart on the boards, Ken Reardon charged into three of his mates and Bill Cowley and took all four out of the play . . . Bill Hollett was so anxious to get into action that he jumped into Ag Smith when he was sent out to relieve Herbie Cain, who had been injured in the second period . . . Jack Irvin is confident that he'll make a real defense man out of Jack Portland

• • •

Before the close of the season, Dick Irvin will have a fine club representing Les Canadiens . . . He has eight new kids, who are not only promising hockey players but who possess plenty of intestinal fortitude . . . It's been many, many seasons since any Les Canadiens outfit gave the battling Bruins check for check and blow for blow . . . Ken Reardon, the new French defense man, who is a brother to Terry, the former Bruin, is only 19 years old. He's a very rugged kid and appears to be at his best whenever the going gets heavy.

• • •

Jack Adams, another rookie, will be out for a week or so. He was hit a terrific check by Dit Clapper in the first period and during the second stanza, Mel Hill checked him into the boards and he retired with a "Charlie Horse" . . . Paul Haynes, another former Bruin, picked up all of the newcomers to Les Canadiens.

Austen Lake Says:

Bowl bid—is the very thing H. C. is attempting to thwart, frustrate and block. That's the spirit of college football!

I'll add a personal laude to B. C.'s to deum. I have seen some, not all, of the Nation's best this fall—Penn, Northwestern, Notre Dame, Navy! They were burly, limber, alert and versed in the swineskin arts. They were handculled, alumni selected, AA-pampered boys with what it takes. But on eye-measure, polish and physical furnishing, B. C. could have licked them all—one at a time of course!

Nor is this a belated attempt to climb over B. C.'s tailboard and join the band of hosannah howlers. Last September 9, a few days after B. C. started its early muscle-jerks, stomach bends and duck-spraddles, I measured them in the Sunday Advertiser thusly:

"This is no pre-autumnal ode to optimism to soothe the ears of B. C.'s old boys. It's plain fact! For, if the hardboiled and cleat scarred veterans of B. C.'s football wars watch the goings on at Alumni Field these hazy afternoons, they'll find 42 of the ruggedest, he-man specimens that have ever graced the grassy hilltop. B. C.'s got it in gobs."

It was largely beef, bone, bodily-suet and knack then! But it has transformed gradually into something more in the ten week interval. For, blended with its physical wealth, has been a motivating spirit among lads who come chiefly from the surrounding neighborhood. They live at home or board in private dwellings. Their diet, habits and behavior is a matter of personal conscience. And by any standard of boyhood they didn't miss! For the component of any great football team is not alone flesh, gristle and bone! It's "wish" and "will" as well—a kind of fraternal harmony, plus faith and affection in the coach! Does that sound too much like a saccharine sob?

Sugar Bowl Bid Amounts to $75,000

FROM A HARD, FINANCIAL VIEWPOINT a Sugar Bowl bid would amount to $75,000. The Orange Bowl cut would be about $30,000. Last Jan. 1's Cotton Bowl brought in $15,000 without expenses. So, aside from the pure sporting aspect, B. C. stands to slice itself a nice hunk of fiscal fruit cake as dessert for the biggest financial feast it has enjoyed since depression years. This, in round numbers, is Curley's estimate of what they have played to this season; Centre, 19,000; Tulane, 42,000; Temple, 25,000; Manhattan, 12,000; Georgetown, 40,000; B. U., 15,000; St. Anselm's, 15,000; Auburn, 30,000, and H. C. (estimated) 35,000. That translated into cash spells "mazuma," of which B. C. has shared and shared alike. So next June when the annual A-A audit is complete and the deficit of other sister sports is subtracted, B. C. will show its first athletic surplus in ten years.

It has won the unenvied credit of its New England college neighbors, the attention of the Nation's football public and a kegful of useful sport dollars. It will be a rosy season, unless H. C. tinges the set hue with a smear of Purple next Saturday.

Pics Seek Second Win Over Gulls at Garden

The Olympics will be gunning for their second straight win of the Eastern Amateur League and a clean sweep of their two-game series with the Atlantic City Sea Gulls when they meet tonight at the Garden.

A preliminary Commonwealth League game between the Boston Reds and the Fitchburg Maroons also is on tap. This contest will start at 6.30 p. m. with the Olympic-Gulls tilts getting underway at the usual hour.

Following tonight's battle, the Pics entertain the New York Rovers on Thanksgiving night and then will play seven road games before appearing again in the Hub which will be Dec. 14.

Coach Hago Harrington is standing pat on his lineup of last Sunday which turned in their first win of the season against these same Sea Gulls, 3 to 1. If they can repeat this evening, they stand a chance of climbing over their present guests and out of the cellar.

Both teams have been working out at the Garden and, with the exception of the Gulls' high scoring ace, Hector Pozzo, every man on both squads is in tip-top condition.

Coach Bert Corbeau revealed yesterday that his bunch was very weary when they took the ice at the Depot last Sunday, after a hurried bus and train ride and he promises the Olympics a much sterner test this p. m.

The ring of steel blades on shimmering ice...the thud of the puck as it strikes the goalie's glove are sweet music to the ears of 7,000,000 hockey fans annually.
It must be good.. so many people like it!

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

LARRY PACINO of Roxbury and Jim Mulligan of Lowell will be back battling for All-America ring honors at the Arena on Monday night . . . This will be the final opportunity these two sturdy fighting men will have to qualify for the New England finals that will be staged at the Garden on December 2.

LARRY PACINO

Pacino won the decision over Mulligan in the semi-finals in the 160-pound class at Monday night's show . . . Pacino was then kayoed by George Hill of Lowell in three rounds in the final bout . . . This was one of the most sensational amateur bouts ever staged in Boston . . . Hill was knocked down five times, and on each occasion he got up off the floor throwing leather . . . In the third round, with Pacino trying for the kill, Hill unloosed a right hand punch that crashed deep into Pacino's stomach . . . Pacino was dropped to the canvas, and counted out.

Pacino feels his own over-confidence was the cause for his defeat and he will be back on the firing line Monday night . . . If Pacino wins over Mulligan and other opposition in the 160-pound group, he will be in a position to battle Hill and the other boxers who will compete in the 160-pound class in the New England finals.

George Freeman says next Monday night's show will equal the three trial tournaments held to date . . . The action and boxing in the All-America tournament has been the best ever offered here . . . Monday night at the Arena not a single person left the building until after Hill had scored his unexpected knockout over Pacino in the final bout of the show.

The New England finals in the Garden on December 2 will bring together a classy array of simon pure punch flingers . . . As in former years, all bouts in the All-America tournament through the New England finals will be offered at a popular price scale of 55 cents and $1.10 . . . The best in boxing at bargain prices!

Bud Taylor, earned $700,000, now broke

JOHNNY BUCKLEY, who has been in Chicago with Pat Foley of Worcester, writes that Bud Taylor, former world's bantamweight champion who earned $700,000 in the ring, is broke and planning to accept a berth as a boxing instructor in a mid-West Federal prison . . . Taylor was a fine boxer, and a much heavier puncher than the average run of boxers . . . He once paid a New York doctor a fee of $5000 to correct bad hands.

"The doctor agreed to do the operation without cost if I failed to become world's bantamweight champion," Taylor told me, "but if I won the title I was to pay him $5000 . . . I was happy to be able to pay the $5000 fee within a year."

Buckley's letter from Chicago is as follows:

"I talked with Eddie Long, formerly the manager of a great fighter, Bud Taylor . . . I was also talking to Taylor and he is broke after making $700,000 in the ring . . . He told me that he expects to become a Boxing Instructor at some new Federal prison out this way. Long is still around fighters but he says that all the fighters nowadays are lacking in class, and he should say so after managing a fighter like Taylor.

"Sammy Woolf, the promoter, is still active . . . Jack Hurley, former manager of Billy Petrolle, is matchmaker at the Coliseum.

"Clair Kelley wants to be remembered to you. He is still with the American. Walter McMenimen, formerly of Cambridge, is still the same old Walter.

"Plenty of horse rooms doing a good business. The police do not interfere. They argue if it's all right to gamble at a race track it should also be okay to do so in the city.

"Jim Mullins; is still here and he is the same Jim as usual.

"Davie Mead from Charlestown is still here with Jack O'Keefe, formerly the manager of Tuffy Griffiths. Griffiths has a tavern and is also a referee.

"George Gardner, the old light heavyweight from Lowell, is here and has a tavern . . . He is a brother of Jimmy Gardner, who is back in Boston after being here for a few years.

"Charley White, the old left hook artist who won so many bouts in Boston, is still here running a tavern . . . Benny Yanger, the old lightweight, and Kid Goodman should remember him, is with the Chicago Athletic Club . . . He was formerly managed by John Hertz who owns the Yellow cabs and race horses . . .I just wrote Hymie Caplan and asked him to let Lew Jenkins fight Pat Foley for the lightweight title, in Boston for Rip Valenti."

Items from my private notebook

ONE OF THE most distinctive parties ever given in Boston was the one Steve Casey, former heavyweight wrestling champion, tossed to Russell Codman, Jr., scion of wealth and a sculling champion when at Harvard, and a party of friends at the City Club . . .

The guest list included among others Dr. Martin H. Spellman, friend of the Codmans and the Caseys, Paul Bowser, Chief Sam Pope of the Boston Fire Department, Lieut. Jack Carroll of the State Police, Vic Jones, sports writer, Arthur Duffy, sports writer and former Georgetown sprinter, Jim Casey, Tom Casey, "Man Mountain" Dean, Tommy Parle and numerous notables of the sculling and rowing world . . . Steve Casey paid a healthy check from the $1000 bet he recently won when the Caseys beat Codman in a sculling race.

Pacino Tries Again for Berth In N.E. 'All' Finals

You just can't keep a good man down, and game Larry Pacino of Roxbury will try to prove it next Monday night at the Arena in the fourth and final elimination show of the current New England All-America ring championships.

Larry, who is N. E. A. A. A. U. middleweight champion, was apparently "in" with a victory over Tom Hill of Lowell in the final of the third show Monday. Then Hill fired a terrific punch to Larry's stomach to upset the favored Roxbury battler.

SATURDAY DEADLINE

So today Pacino grinned ruefully, then sent his entry for the fourth show along to Tom Kanaly, who is accepting entries at the Arena up to Saturday morning. There will be no later entries accepted for this show.

Monday night's program includes fights in 12 classes, eight at championship weights, and novice bouts in 118, 135, 160 and heavyweight divisions. Winners in the show, plus victors in three previous eliminations will battle at the Garden Dec. 9 in the N. E. All-American title finals.

MULLIGAN ENTERED

Dec. 23 at the Garden the eight N. E. All-America champions will meet "All" titleholders from New York, Albany and Baltimore in the Eastern finals. The Nationals will be staged in January at the Garden.

Jim Mulligan, who met Pacino in one of the standout trial bouts of last Monday's show, is one of the middleweights already entered for next Monday. Also in the class are Billy Connolly of Roxbury, Eddie Yutkin of Cambridge, and Wes Jones of Plymouth.

HEARST SHOOT BOOM TO JUNIOR GUN CLUBS

Scores of new junior organizations devoted to marksmanship are springing up all over New England as the result of the booming incentive given by the William Randolph Hearst Junior Rifle Trophy Competition.

These new clubs represent high schools, both private and public, junior high schools and social organizations. They are not all male groups either as the girls have taken very much to the sport of shooting and are more than holding their own with the boys.

WRITE TO N. R. A.

In response to many inquiries as to how to go about organizing a junior rifle club, the rifle editor of the American-Record suggests that interested parties write the Junior Division of the National Rifle Ass'n, 1600 Rhode Island ave., Washington, D. C.

The N. R. A. Junior Division has all sorts of most informative, thoroughly prepared literature available at slight cost.

Every possible angle to organization is included. Of special value is a set of suggested by-laws which will meet the application for csarter for membership in the National Rifle Ass'n when the new club reaches that most important stage.

COVERS ALL DETAILS

In the NRA booklet on rifle shooting instruction for the junior division, the following subjects are gone into at great detail: The boy problem, the training course, ranges, equipment, range operation, care and cleaning, instruction, NRA organization, qualification courses, winning medals in matches.

The entire series is liberally sprinkled with expert pictures, showing the intimate details of the gun and the various correct positions for firing.

To get off on the right foot, any group of juniors which intends to go in for the sport and those clubs which will fire in the Hearst Junior matches, should have copies of this fine NRA material on hand. Every word is important to these youngsters who to qualify as juniors must be under 19 years of age. Boys and girls are both eligible.

All-America Entry Blank

The following classes will be contested in tryouts in the American-Record All-America boxing shows at Arena, Nov. 11, Nov. 18, Nov. 25, Dec. 2.

112, 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and 175 pounds and heavyweight

FAIR RAIN SNOW CLOUDY

Traffic Tie-Up—Roadways, greased with slush, made driving hazardous today . . . and this line of cars from Cottage Farm Bridge to downtown Boston tells the story of delay. Walking wasn't any better.

Boston Common—Pretty winter scene is this . . . as snow blankets Boston Common with State House forming an impressive background. However, snow was wet, soggy, gave autoists a headache and snarled traffic in many spots.

Boston Evening American Photos

Snow at M. I. T.—Ten inches of snow is a lot of snow, especially when it covers a line of cars like these at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology today.

Knee-Deep—Just to show you what kind of a handicap the snow imposed on fair pedestrians today . . . take a gander at Irene Olsen of Back Bay as she snowplowed through a mountain at Park st. subway station.
